Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its fifth session from 4 to 15 May 2009. The review of Afghanistan was held at the 8th meeting, on 7 May 2009. The delegation of Afghanistan was headed by H.E. Mohammad Qasim Hashimzai, Deputy Minister of Justice. At its 12th meeting, on 11 May 2009, the Working Group adopted the present report on Afghanistan.
2. On 8 September 2008, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Afghanistan: Azerbaijan, Cameroon and Republic of Korea.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1, the following documents were issued for the review of Afghanistan:
 - (a) A national report submitted in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/AFG/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/AFG/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/AFG/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Argentina, Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany, Hungary, Latvia, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Afghanistan through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. SUMMARY OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE REVIEW PROCESS

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. At the 8th meeting, on 7 May 2009, the Deputy Minister of Justice opened his statement by referring to Afghanistan's State report, prepared in a participatory process based on principles of transparency, participation, responsibility, accountability, nondiscrimination and inclusiveness. His delegation included representatives from law enforcement institutions, national human rights watch agencies and civil society.
6. Following almost three decades of war and disorder, Afghanistan's legal, political, social and cultural infrastructure is weakened. Nevertheless, in direct cooperation with the international community, Afghanistan managed to make a number of important achievements, including the adoption of the 2004 Constitution which laid the foundation of Afghanistan's legal framework. It bound the Government to monitor and observe the Charter of the United Nations, the International Declaration of Human Rights, international treaties and human rights conventions ratified by Afghanistan.
7. The delegation provided additional information on measures taken to enhance the professional capacity of national human rights institutions, the efforts made to entrench human rights and challenges encountered.

8. The Supreme Court has trained some 800 judges on fair trial and more than 750 modern and Sharia law graduates have been employed in the justice sector. Lack of security remains the main challenge for courts and judges. The Ministry of Justice has established the Bar Association and registered 102 political parties and 1,348 social organizations. However, despite these efforts some problems remain, including the failure to meet human rights standards inside the prisons. The Attorney-General's Office faces problems due to lack of availability of lawyers especially in the provinces, lack of security for prosecutors, shortage of technical equipment during investigation, interference of powerful people and low salary levels for prosecutors. The Ministry of the Interior has made efforts in training the Afghan National Police to protect human rights in discharging its duties. Nevertheless, a number of complaints show that further work is needed in this area.

9. The Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission (AIHRC) with support from the Government has been able to monitor prisons and detention centres without prior notice. In agreement with a number of international military forces it has also been able to monitor the situation of Afghans detained accused of having links with terrorists. A number of additional, specialized commissions have been established recently to ensure security of human rights, including the anti-corruption and civil administration reform commission, commission to address capital punishment cases, board for addressing complaints of prisoners transferred from Bagram airbase and Guantanamo prison, board for addressing the situation of prisoners in Kabul's main prisons and detention centres, and commission for elimination of violence against women.

10. Civil society plays an important role in conducting research on different human rights issues.

11. The delegation mentioned some of the most important national policies and strategies adopted to systematically support human rights, including the Afghan National Development Strategy approved by the President on 21 April 2008.

12. The Transitional Justice Strategy and Action Plan on Peace, Justice and Reconciliation was adopted in 2005. With regard to implementation of transitional justice, judicial actions were not taken due to lack of suitable conditions, for example, insecurity, lack of required capacity in the Government and the influence of powerful violators of human rights.

13. The delegation provided further information regarding measures for social protection. The Government was providing shelter to 9,312 orphan children in 54 orphanages, a total of 362 kindergartens were fully functional throughout the country. Concerning the right to food and to an adequate standard of living and shelter, in 2005, 44 per cent of Afghans lived under the poverty line, and 75 per cent did not have food security. The Ministry of Agriculture has developed a special food security programme in May 2008. Additionally, the rapid growth of urban dwellings, the return of new groups of refugees and internally displaced people, the expansion of poverty and slums in the cities put the Government in a difficult situation when considering citizen's right to shelter.

14. Achievements in the last seven years on the right to health included a reduction in mortality rate of children under five. Health service coverage increased to 85 per cent of the population through 1,688 functioning medical facilities. Yet, malnutrition remained one of the most challenging public health issues.

15. On the right to education, the delegation provided information on some positive developments. In 2008 more than 6 million students attended schools, one third of whom were girls with 15,842 attending schools in rural areas. Adult literacy courses for women had opened all over the country. However, major challenges remained, including the destruction of schools by armed anti-Government forces, the shortage of qualified teachers particularly in rural areas, the shortage of financial and technical resources and low salaries for teachers.

16. The delegation pointed out that ensuring the right to life of citizens has been one of the biggest challenges. It is often violated through civilian casualties and suicide bombings.

17. Concerning media and freedom of expression, the delegation explained that there were three national and 21 local television stations in the country, only one was State-run. Some 57 radio stations operated throughout the country and hundreds of newspapers and pamphlets published in an environment free of fear and censorship. He noted some of the main challenges, such as the lack of professionalism in some journalistic circles and the intimidation of journalists by armed anti-Government forces.

18. Regarding efforts in the area of non-discrimination and equality, over the last seven years Afghanistan made some major achievements in ensuring women's rights, including the formation of the Ministry of Women Affairs. Twenty-eight per cent of the National Assembly members were women, the highest proportion in the region. However, due to insecurity in some provinces, a culture of immunity from punishment, low awareness of women's rights, particularly among women themselves, old and harmful superstitious customs and lack of job opportunities were among the most pressing challenges.

19. Reference was made to measures taken concerning the rights of minorities, human trafficking and the rights of the child. Afghanistan has about 1,000,000 disabled persons. The Government cannot extend sufficient assistance to them due to lack of resources and facilities. However, the Law on the rights and benefits of disabled people and the Law on victims of war and their families have been adopted.

20. Currently a total of 3.3 million Afghans live in neighboring countries. The Government has made efforts to alleviate the situation but success depends on the level of cooperation by the host countries.

21. The delegation considered that the UPR State reporting process provided a unique opportunity to highlight the achievements and the challenges of human rights in Afghanistan and a good opportunity for the international community and other human rights actors in the world to put the situation of Afghanistan in a realistic comparative analytical perspective and consider its problems and challenges.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

22. During the interactive dialogue 59 delegations made statements. A number of delegations appreciated the balanced report prepared by Afghanistan, indicating, inter alia, progress made and remaining constraints and challenges.

23. Algeria expressed concern about the situation of civilians affected by armed conflict, especially yesterday's victims in Afghanistan and requested clarification of the President's refusal to sign the "National Reconciliation Charter". Algeria made a number of recommendations concerning: the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission, achieving the national development strategy, and seeking assistance for report preparation and achieving the MDGs.

24. Qatar noted that human rights in Afghanistan are guaranteed by a number of political and judicial mechanisms and that the Constitution ensures the rights and freedoms of citizens.

Afghanistan ratified most of the core human rights conventions and attaches great importance to the protection of minorities and the development of rural areas. Noting that grave challenges face the country, Qatar asked about the priorities of the Government to build the capacities in the field of human rights, about the legal basis for the judiciary and to what extent the judiciary respects human rights norms.

25. India noted that much more needed to be done, especially in capacity building, improving civilian oversight of security forces, enhancing justice administration and combating adverse social practices against women and children. Pointing out its USD 1.2 billion assistance since 2002, crucial in the fulfilment of basic human rights in Afghanistan, India noted its serious concern at increasing terrorist activities by Taliban that targeted development efforts by the international community, like the attack on the Indian Embassy in Kabul in July 2008.

26. Finland while welcoming the President's decision to review the constitutionality of the draft Shia Personal Status Law, asked about the possibilities to review the constitutionality of laws in general. Finland further commented on the situation of women and the independence of the Afghanistan human rights institution and made a number of recommendations.

27. The Islamic Republic of Iran made a number of recommendations to Afghanistan. It stressed that poverty alleviation, the eradication of illiteracy and combating drug trafficking and terrorism need to be taken seriously at all levels of Government. It mentioned that increasing civilian casualties was a major cause of concern.

28. Singapore commended the Government's clear resolve to stem administrative corruption. Other important steps taken since the fall of the Taliban include providing education and empowering women. Singapore asked how the Government plans to promote education and school attendance and enquired about the lower enrolment of girls.

29. Norway addressed four issues: a) civil society and human rights defenders; b) remaining pervasive discrimination against women and girls; c) deterioration of freedom of expression, including intimidation of and violence towards Afghan journalists; and d) the implementation of the Action Plan on Peace, Justice and Reconciliation and made related recommendations.

30. The Netherlands raised concerns and made recommendations on a) the establishment of a Human Rights Unit within the Ministry of Justice, b) transitional justice, c) freedom of expression and media diversity, and d) women's rights.

31. The Philippines commended the establishment of a Ministry of Women's Affairs and affirmative action policies that increase participation of women in political life. It asked about the legal grounds laid for ensuring basic health services and what strategies and programmes have been adopted and implemented. It asked about Government efforts to combat trafficking in children and further improve access to basic education and promote food security, especially in rural areas.

32. Switzerland was concerned about and made recommendations relating to the: growing insecurity and the allegations of international law violations committed by multinational and national armed forces, national security forces and any other armed actors; situation of women in Afghanistan; functioning of institutions; and strengthening the democratic process and free and transparent elections.

33. The Republic of Korea welcomed the establishment of special State commissions which aim to uphold the human rights of children, women and detainees. It noted that prejudice and discrimination against women are still persistent. The growing number of IDPs and returnees is of great concern to the Republic of Korea.

34. Bhutan recognized the challenges and constraints faced by Afghanistan and noted that progress in the area of governance and towards the achievement of the MDG targets in health and education were encouraging. Afghanistan's joining the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation in April 2007 was a natural extension of historical linkages and regional cultural affinities.

35. France asked about measures to improve law enforcement officials' knowledge regarding criminal procedure and the rights of detainees. It asked also how Afghanistan intended to combat threats, intimidations and violence against women and what assurances could be given regarding the adoption of legal texts that allow for a true and real promotion of the condition of women. Information about measures to be taken regarding transitional justice was requested. France made a number of recommendations.

36. Indonesia inquired whether Afghanistan has any plan to ratify additional core human rights conventions. It noted the adoption of the Afghan National Development Strategy. It asked about new Government strategies to reinforce the role of civil society and if the role of AIHRC can be further expanded.

37. Azerbaijan mentioned that terrorism, insecurity and poverty continue to hinder the normal life of Afghani people and continue to pose serious challenges for the Government. It strongly supported the efforts of the Government aimed at eliminating all difficulties, advancing democracy and defending human rights. Azerbaijan took positive note that AIHRC functions effectively and mentioned the comprehensive national development strategy.

38. Mexico noted with interest the recommendations in the national report, which it interpreted as voluntary commitments. Mexico made a number of recommendations. It recommended linking those recommendations to concrete actions for their implementation.

39. South Africa noted that acute poverty and unemployment prevail, and women continue to face enormous social, economic, security and human rights challenges. It referred to the importance of the requisite resources being provided to effectively implement the National Action Plan for Women. It recalled that the three-decades-long crisis had a detrimental impact on children, who have suffered all kinds of violence. South Africa made a recommendation.

40. Sri Lanka commended Afghanistan for the adoption and amendment of a number of laws in conformity with human rights standards, the creation of mechanisms for protecting and monitoring human rights and the initiation of the reporting process on international human rights treaties. It commended the work of AIHRC. It was encouraged to note that 50 private prisons have been closed due to monitoring and follow-up activities and more than 3,614 illegally detained individuals have been released. Sri Lanka made a recommendation.

41. Belgium, while noting the efforts made with the creation of a ministry for women's affairs and the adoption of a strategic plan of action for women's rights, said that Afghan women are still too often victims of domestic and sexual violence and other types of discrimination. It was concerned about the draft Shia Personal Status Law and asked if any amendments have been made. Belgium drew attention to other significant human rights challenges facing Afghanistan in the area of freedom of expression and the media and made recommendations.

42. Germany commended the Government for making visible progress in the area of health care under difficult circumstances. It commented, inter alia, on reports from the United Nations and NGO stakeholders about significant restrictions to freedom of expression and asked about efforts by the Government to eliminate such limitations. Germany made a number of recommendations.

43. Nepal indicated that Afghanistan has several development challenges, including investment in human capital and the broad-based recovery and reconstruction of national infrastructures. This requires generous international cooperation in a sustained manner. Nepal made a recommendation.

44. Bahrain indicated that the Government was able, with the cooperation of the international community, to take great steps, including the adoption of a new Constitution and the holding of presidential, parliamentary and municipal elections. Bahrain welcomed the efforts to include civil society as a main stakeholder in the promotion of human rights. It asked to what extent the Constitution takes into account human rights and about the political participation of women. Bahrain made a recommendation.

45. Saudi Arabia referred to the establishment of a political system, the approval of a new Constitution, the holding of presidential, parliamentary and municipal elections and the setting up of human rights monitoring mechanisms. Afghanistan had adopted national strategies for education and health and nutrition. Saudi Arabia made a recommendation.

46. Morocco mentioned that Afghanistan has demonstrated its commitment to human rights and set up a number of strategies and action plans to promote human rights, in particular in the areas of justice, education, children and health. It asked about measures to combat HIV/AIDS and ensure access to drinking water. Morocco welcomed the adoption of the transitional justice programme and made recommendations.

47. Egypt said that Afghanistan is exerting commendable efforts towards the reinstatement of stability and the establishment of the rule of law and asked about the steps envisioned to put into effect the plans and programmes outlined in the national report. Egypt made a number of recommendations including on implementation of laws, in conformity with universally agreed human rights norms.

48. Canada recognized the challenges faced by the Government, saluted the efforts to consolidate democracy, indicated it was ready to provide continued human rights training to Afghan national security forces and encouraged the Government to increase its efforts to promote and protect human rights. Canada made a number of recommendations.

49. The United States of America offered a number of recommendations to the Government with full recognition of the progress that had already been achieved.

50. Austria made a number of recommendations in relation to: the impact of conflict on civilians; discrimination against women; and administration of justice. Austria welcomed the introduction of the juvenile criminal code in 2005 and asked about concrete measures to improve its implementation.

51. Brazil commended the increase in school attendance, especially with regard to the access of girls to education, and the widening of the school curriculum. It asked for further information on the role that international cooperation could play in the improvement of health indicators. Brazil made a number of recommendations.

52. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland welcomed Afghanistan's commitment to improving human rights and acknowledgement of the challenges, including violations by rule of law institutions, lack of equality and due process in the judicial system. It welcomed Afghanistan's decision to review the Law on the Personal Status of Followers of Shia Jurisprudence. It also welcomed improvements in the situation for women and girls, but noted ongoing discrimination. It also noted concerns about intimidation of journalists and asked what Afghanistan was doing to ensure a free press. The United Kingdom made 4 recommendations.

53. Turkey shared the view that the state of insecurity remains the main obstacle to the enjoyment of human rights. It stressed that utmost care must be taken to protect civilians and ensure tangible improvement of the living conditions of the Afghan people. Turkey made a recommendation to Afghanistan. Lastly, Turkey stressed that it will contribute to ensuring a secure environment for the upcoming Presidential and Provincial Council elections.

54. Pakistan indicated that Afghanistan's commitment to human rights is demonstrated by its very candid and frank national report. It noted that insecurity and armed conflict limit access to basic services, including education, and asked about the measures envisaged to overcome this problem. It said that Pakistan has extended financial and material assistance to Afghanistan and is contributing to the reconstruction of that country. Pakistan made a recommendation.

55. Palestine referred to the considerable developments in Afghanistan including the adoption of a new Constitution, the development of the political system, the reform of the judiciary, the increasing levels of education provided to children and the creation of the Ministry of Women's Affairs. Palestine made a recommendation to Afghanistan. It believed that the recommendations contained in the national report are extremely important.

56. Australia expressed concern about the recent announcement of the Shia Personal Status Law but welcomed the announcement of the President that the draft law will be reviewed and amended. Australia made a number of recommendations..

57. New Zealand expressed concerns about the rights of women, particularly the Shia Personal Status Law. It made a number of recommendations on: reviewing laws, reducing maternal mortality and the use of the death penalty.

58. Tunisia noted with satisfaction the efforts in the area of gender equality, the consecration of the principle of equality before the law between women and men in the Constitution, the creation of the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the accession to CEDAW. It made a recommendation.

59. Iceland noted that Afghanistan's first periodic report on its implementation of CEDAW was several years overdue. Iceland made a recommendation.

60. Sweden raised a number of concerns, including about violence against journalists in Afghanistan, and cited General Assembly resolutions 62/149 and 63/168, in which the Assembly called upon States to establish a moratorium on executions with a view to abolishing the death penalty. It made a number of recommendations.

61. Denmark raised concerns about and made a number of recommendations including in relation to widespread and comprehensive discrimination against women throughout Afghanistan.

62. Bangladesh noted with appreciation a number of positive initiatives taken in the constitutional and legal spheres to safeguard human rights. It indicated that the Afghan National Development Strategy provides a broad and comprehensive framework for pursuing an effective national development agenda. Bangladesh made a number of recommendations.

63. Poland welcomed the adoption of the Constitution, which enshrines fundamental freedoms and human rights. It referred to reports of arbitrary and illegal detentions and expressed concern about overcrowding in prisons, as well as cases of torture and inhumane treatment in custody. Poland made a number of recommendations.

64. Uzbekistan commended the steps Afghanistan has taken to ensure human rights and welcomed the international cooperation given to the country. It asked for more information about the measures taken to ensure equality between men and women and also about the protection of right of women and children in Afghanistan.

65. Ireland asked what further steps Afghanistan will take to protect women from discrimination and harassment; to secure their rights; and to guarantee their position in society as equal citizens. Of equal concern was the continued use of the death penalty in Afghanistan, and access to a fair trial and due process afforded to defendants in death penalty cases. Ireland made two recommendations.

66. Slovenia expressed concern about the grave abuses of children in Afghanistan, in particular their recruitment by State and non-State armed groups and the training and use of children as suicide bombers by non-State armed groups such as the Taliban. Slovenia is gravely concerned about the reported increase in the number of child victims of attacks against schools by Taliban insurgents who deny children the right to education, especially by preventing girls and female teachers from going to school by throwing acid at them. Slovenia made a number of recommendations.

67. Slovakia, while acknowledging positive developments in the promotion and protection of human rights, expressed concern about reports of increased child labour and the dire social and economic situation in Afghanistan. Slovakia made a number of recommendations.

68. Hungary made a number of recommendations to Afghanistan, including to advance the preparation and organization of democratic elections. Hungary appreciated the achievements in the field of education and welcomed the adoption of the National Education Strategy.

69. Latvia welcomed the ratification of key international human rights instruments and the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. Considering the previous cooperation of Afghanistan with numerous special procedures mandate holders, Latvia made a recommendation in that regard.

70. Malaysia said that the Government has demonstrated its commitment and determination to improve the human rights situation and welcomed the close cooperation between the Government and various United Nations bodies. Malaysia proposed a number of recommendations, including on children in armed conflict.

71. Lebanon noted the positive developments in the field of human rights, including the establishment of AIHRC and the special state commissions. It welcomed the Government's endeavours to set the country on the path of economic development in a difficult context of conflict and emergency. Lebanon made a recommendation to Afghanistan.

72. The United Arab Emirates welcomed the efforts of the Government in all the critical human rights areas, especially to improve the conditions of life such as combating poverty, promoting the right to food, adequate housing, education, health, women and children. It requested information on the initiatives of the Government to combat and eradicate poverty and to implement the CRC.

73. Spain noted progress made, raised a number of concerns and made a number of recommendations. It was concerned about the rising threats to journalists. It acknowledged the good work of AIHRC and welcomed the work of the Ministry for Women's Affairs. It pointed out the need to ensure that the Afghan population has better knowledge of the protection of human rights.

74. China stressed that, with the support of the international community, Afghanistan has established a new political system and taken positive measures including the adoption of a new Constitution and the establishment of mechanisms for protecting and monitoring human rights. Afghanistan is actively implementing a national development strategy with poverty reduction and improvement of people's livelihood as a priority. China asked what the specific plans and measures of this process are, and what kind of assistance and support Afghanistan would like to receive from the international community.

75. Maldives noted the efforts of Afghanistan such as the ratification of a Constitution that embodies the fundamental human rights; the establishment of AIHRC; ratification of six international human rights instruments; reopening of schools and providing educational opportunities for 6 million students in 2008/2009; and the formation of a Ministry of women's Affairs for effective implementation of CEDAW and active participation of women in politics, the judiciary and social economic and cultural spheres. It acknowledged the positive engagement of Afghanistan with OHCHR, the special procedures, UNHCR and other United Nations agencies.

76. Argentina noted progress in the human rights field as well as some concerns and made a number of recommendations. It noted that, according to the national report, there are serious inadequacies in the judicial system and that the Government has not replied to any communications transmitted by special procedures.

77. Jordan said that Afghanistan continues to take steps to effectively address many political, economic and social problems as well as to improve the human rights situation. Jordan made a number of recommendations to Afghanistan.

78. Japan noted that anti-corruption measures should be strengthened and the security situation improved. Japan noted that the re-examination of the Shia Personal Status Law is now being carried out and hoped the proposed legislation is appropriately received in a way consistent with the promotion and protection of human rights, especially those of women. Japan made a number of recommendations to Afghanistan.

79. The Czech Republic recognized the utmost importance of the election processes and made a number of recommendations, including on torture, arbitrary detention and human rights abuses by security forces.

80. Greece noted that the intensification of the conflict and the lack of infrastructures and facilities in rural areas constitute an obstacle to the realization of the right to education. Furthermore, it referred with concern to the increase in the number of child victims resulting from attacks against schools by insurgents. Greece made a recommendation.

81. Albania noted with satisfaction the creation of special committees responsible for monitoring the human rights situation in Afghanistan, including six commissions in charge of assuring the respect of human rights during investigations, interrogations and detention. In Afghan prisons, the commissions examine the problems of children and youth, death penalty cases, detainee complaints and the elimination of violence against women. Albania also expressed concern about the situation of Afghan women and made a recommendation in that regard.

82. Addressing the concerns expressed regarding the Shia Personal Status Law, the Afghanistan delegation stated that the President ordered the review of the law, which will be done in consultation with the international community in order to make it consistent with Afghanistan's international commitments.

83. The existing law, which complies with all international commitments, and has been enforced for the last four years, removed all restrictions on freedom of expression. The new press law also remained consistent international commitments. Its implementation has been delayed due to some technicalities.

84. With regard to the moratorium on executions, the delegation said that Afghanistan's criminal law recognized the death penalty as did the law of other Islamic countries. However, the penalty is rarely applied; it can only be applied after the decision of the trial court and two stages of appellate courts, including the Supreme Court. The application of the sentence further requires the consent of the President, who scrutinizes the whole case with the intention of finding reason to commute the sentence.

85. The delegation noted that UNAMA was assisting in the process of establishing the Human Rights Unit in the Ministry of Justice. This unit will gather information on human rights from other ministries and localities and monitor the Government's implementation of human rights principles.

86. The delegation indicated that new prisons would be built by 2012 to improve prison conditions and the treatment of prisoners. About $10 million has been allocated to implement the new reform.

87. While laws drafted under the present Government were consistent with human rights standards, resources and personnel were needed to review earlier laws to ensure their conformity with international commitments.

88. The delegation noted that Afghanistan acceded to the United Nations Convention against Corruption in 2003 and that the fight against corruption is mainstreamed in the work of Government. A special unit and prosecutor's office has been established to fight corruption. The Government is committed to the protection and promotion of women's rights and has established a National Action Plan for Women to promote gender equality and enforce gender mainstreaming in governmental institutions. The Ministry of Women provides capacity-building classes, microcredit opportunities and literacy classes. Afghan women participate in 34 provincial councils and are active members of various political parties. Additionally, AIHRC is currently headed by a woman. Initial steps have been taken to prepare an initial report for the Committee on Discrimination against Women.

89. The delegation of Afghanistan responded to the observations of the Philippines and New Zealand, noting that article 52 of the Constitution stresses the right to health. The Government has the obligation to provide free health care and the Ministry of Health is authorized to ensure medical and preventive measures for public safety. Several strategies and public-private partnerships further this aim. Between 2004 and 2008, approximately 148 policy guidelines, laws, regulations and protocols were developed, applying to different aspects of health. Afghanistan's achievements in the years following the Taliban's rule have resulted in reduced mortality rates of children under 5 years of age (from 257 in 2001 to 191 in 2007), the expansion of public service coverage (from 9 per cent in 2001 to 85 per cent in 2007) and expansion of immunization to cover 83 per cent of the population. The Government stressed that the top health priority now is to improve maternal health and reduce maternal mortality.

90. In response to the observation made by Morocco, Afghanistan referred to the water law and the establishment of a programme to provide safe drinking water for 15 million people for 5 years. Concerning people with HIV/AIDS, the delegation indicated that there are 556 cases in the country and the Government has established counselling programs, testing and treatment centres, drop-in programmes, outreach programmes and a strong effort to raise awareness among community and health workers.

91. Various reform processes are under way to improve performance of the police. Due to 30 years of war and the existence of layers of laws and practices inherited from various regimes, some laws might not conform to international human rights standards. The delegation emphasized that all police officers are expected to respect human rights and follow the rule of law and that the in-service training provided to them at all training centres and schools emphasize these expectations. When a complaint is filed alleging violation of human rights by police officers, the case is referred to the Inspector-General who investigates the charges. If evidence of misconduct is found, penalties are imposed.

92. The Inspector-General reports directly to the Minister of the Interior and has a human rights unit in headquarters and human rights offices in the provinces to ensure proper police conduct across the country.

93. Since March 2008 private security companies are subject to administrative regulations. There are currently 39 legally registered companies regulated under this law. The remaining private security companies are considered illegal armed groups and are being disarmed. A draft law seeking to strengthen regulation of private security forces is being debated in Parliament.

94. The delegation emphasized that the Afghan Constitution prohibits torture under any circumstances. If a court were to discover that an admission were obtained under torture, that admission would be considered invalid and those who commit an act of torture would face prosecution. The Government further mentioned that it has received the support of international donors to set up legal aid programmes and offices in different provinces in Afghanistan. The delegation concluded its intervention by thanking the Council for the opportunity to discuss human rights developments and challenges facing Afghanistan and stressed the Government's determination to improve the human rights situation with the assistance of the international community.

II. CONCLUSIONS AND/OR RECOMMENDATIONS

95. The recommendations formulated during the interactive dialogue have been examined by Afghanistan and the recommendations listed below enjoy the support of Afghanistan:

1. Incorporate international conventions, to which Afghanistan is a party, into domestic legal reform initiatives and translate these into concrete policies and programmes (Norway);
2. Undertake a national process to harmonize legislation, including local laws, with international human rights obligations (Mexico);
3. Review all its national legislation to ensure its compliance with the Constitution and international obligations, including to protect the right to privacy and non-discrimination (Czech Republic);
4. Pay greater attention to the respect for women's rights when adopting legislative measures and abrogate all discriminatory measures against women (Belgium);
5. Take promptly any necessary action to comply with any findings of the review of the draft Shia Personal Status Law with the Constitution (Australia);
6. Proceed with its review of the Shia Personal Status Law, ensure that it conforms to international commitments and actively works to promote the rights of women (Ireland);
7. Continue the revision of the Shia Personal Status Law and harmonize it with the international treaties signed by Afghanistan (Hungary);
8. Establish immediately a process to review all draft legislation, before it is adopted, so as to ensure compliance with Afghanistan's international obligations (New Zealand);
9. Consider, when possible, to gradually increase financial resources allocated to the budget of the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission (Algeria);
10. Strengthen and support the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission so that it discharges its mandate in the most effective manner (Jordan);
11. Make better use of the Commission's work as a contribution to improving the rule of law (Finland);

12. Create national institutions and improved capacity, which is essential for peace, stability, and democracy and for laying a solid foundation for the protection of human rights in the country (Nepal);
