Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its thirty-third session from 6 to 17 May 2019. The review of Costa Rica was held at the 11th meeting, on 13 May 2019. The delegation of Costa Rica was headed by the Minister of Communication, Nancy Gabriela Marín Espinoza. At its 17th meeting, held on 16 May 2019, the Working Group adopted the report on Costa Rica.
2. On 15 January 2019, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Costa Rica: Afghanistan, Chile and Togo.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Costa Rica:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/33/CRI/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/33/CRI/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/33/CRI/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Germany, Portugal, on behalf of Group of Friends on national implementation, reporting and follow-up, Slovenia, Spain, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and Uruguay was transmitted to Costa Rica through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation stated that Costa Rica was honoured to participate in the universal periodic review process. Over the past five years, the country had experienced many positive changes, but a number of challenges remained. The promotion and protection of human rights was at the core of Costa Rican democracy, with a robust institutional structure, strong oversight bodies and an active civil society. Furthermore, international norms related to the protection of those rights had a supra-Constitutional character.
6. Regarding the right to a healthy environment, the country had achieved one of the highest levels of coverage of indoor potable water in Latin America and was investing heavily in improving sanitation. It had managed to reverse the trend in deforestation, reaching forest cover of more than 52 per cent of the national territory. Ninety-five per cent of electricity production was free of carbon emissions and the aim of the National Decarbonization Plan was to reach a zero net emissions economy by the year 2050. In addition, the National Plan for Development and Public Investment 2019–2022, in which citizens had participated in the preparation, included 138 indicators that were linked directly or indirectly to the indicators of the Sustainable Development Goals.
7. The Constitution protected the right to equality and non-discrimination. Costa Rica had made progress in enhancing the human rights of different groups. It had adopted new labour legislation to reduce judicial delays and had prohibited all forms of discrimination in employment based on age, ethnicity, sex, religion, race and other factors. It had also taken important steps to guarantee the rights of elderly persons, including by ratifying the Inter-American Convention on Protecting the Human Rights of Older Persons. It had established the National Council for Older Persons to coordinate actions for the care of older persons in situations of social vulnerability.

8. In order to combat poverty and extreme poverty, Costa Rica had implemented a number of innovative tools, such as the Multidimensional Poverty Index, to measure the different types of deprivation suffered by families living in poverty. It had also adopted the National Strategy for Poverty Reduction, which used a multisectoral and inter-institutional approach to guarantee access to a comprehensive set of programmes and services.

9. Regarding the situation of persons deprived of their liberty, Costa Rica had promoted the use of alternative measures to detention, including electronic monitoring. As a result, it had reduced prison overcrowding from 48.1 per cent in 2016 to 31.1 per cent in 2018.

10. The current Cabinet was the first in the country's republican history to be composed of an equal number of men and women. In addition, the most recent legislative elections had resulted in the highest representation of women in the Legislative Assembly in the country's history. In 2018, combating violence against women had been declared a national priority and all State entities had been requested to initiate or strengthen programmes to that end. In an effort to combat domestic violence, the judiciary had created an integrated victim support service platform that included psychological, medical and legal assistance services, all of which were provided free of charge.

11. With regard to access to health, the inclusion of the human papillomavirus vaccine for all 10-year-old girls had been approved. The number of teenage pregnancies had decreased in recent years; further reducing that number was one of the goals of the National Strategic Plan for Adolescent Health. The use of emergency oral contraception had been approved; it would be available without the need for a medical prescription. The application of therapeutic abortion was still pending and Costa Rica hoped to ensure its effective application and the issuance of the technical guidelines regulating it in 2019.

12. Regarding the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, the symbolic act of raising the flag of diversity for the first time at the Presidential Palace in 2014 had been followed by at least 12 executive decrees and directives that allowed same-sex couples to access social security, pension inheritance and equal treatment in health centres and prisons. Following the advisory opinion issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in response to a consultation by Costa Rica, from May 2020 civil marriage for same-sex couples would become a reality in the country. The Electoral Court had issued an administrative order to allow transgender persons to change their name on their identity documents, in accordance with their gender identity. The Government had issued the same order for all other official documentation. The Presidential Commissioner for issues related to lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, created in 2018 within the Office of the President of the Republic, coordinated the initiatives of the Government in that field.

13. The Legislative Assembly had approved a number of laws to enhance human rights protection in the country, including a law to increase from 10 to 25 years, starting from the age of majority of the victim, the statute of limitations for sexual offences against children; a law on access to justice for indigenous peoples; a law strengthening the legal protection of girls and adolescent women in situations of gender-based violence associated with abusive relationships; and a law promoting the personal autonomy of persons with disabilities.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

14. During the interactive dialogue, 85 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

15. Pakistan appreciated the efforts of Costa Rica to combat domestic violence and noted the establishment by the judiciary of an integrated victim support service platform. It welcomed the National Strategy for Poverty Reduction, also known as the Bridge to Development strategy.

16. The Republic of Korea noted with satisfaction concrete policies on gender equality, education and public health. It hoped that Costa Rica would continue addressing the remaining challenges in achieving the Sustainable Development Goals.

17. The Republic of Moldova congratulated Costa Rica for presenting its first voluntary national review on the Sustainable Development Goals. It welcomed the ratification of several human rights instruments and the progress made on women's rights and empowerment.
18. Rwanda welcomed the steps taken by Costa Rica to implement the recommendations from the previous review cycle, including through the adoption of human rights legislation and policies, particularly to promote gender equality and social cohesion.
19. Senegal noted the ratification by Costa Rica of several international human rights instruments. It also welcomed measures to update labour legislation, reduce poverty, combat racial discrimination and protect foreign workers' rights.
20. Singapore commended the efforts of Costa Rica to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, its policies to protect women and girls and its commitment against racism and xenophobia, in particular the 2015 Constitutional amendment recognizing the multi-ethnic and multicultural character of the State.
21. Slovenia applauded Costa Rica for its leadership in the adoption the Regional Agreement on Access to Information, Public Participation and Justice in Environmental Matters in Latin America and the Caribbean. Slovenia was concerned about the low prosecution rate of cases of violence against women.
22. South Africa welcomed the commitment of Costa Rica to the Sustainable Development Goals, the promotion of the rights of people of African descent and the establishment of a mechanism for consultation with indigenous peoples.
23. Spain welcomed the establishment of the high-level commission responsible for ensuring the implementation of the Criminalization of Violence against Women Act and noted with satisfaction the progress on access to drinking water and sanitation.
24. The State of Palestine welcomed the efforts made by Costa Rica in the area of education, including several legislative initiatives in that regard, and the improvement of the juvenile justice system.
25. Switzerland welcomed the adoption by Costa Rica of the National Policy for Addressing and Preventing Violence against Women 2017–2032.
26. The Syrian Arab Republic thanked Costa Rica for its national report and made recommendations.
27. Togo welcomed legal and institutional measures to ensure equal rights for the whole population, particularly women, children, refugees and migrants. It encouraged Costa Rica to strengthen national action for refugees.
28. Trinidad and Tobago commended Costa Rica for its ambitious climate action. It noted the adoption of the amendments to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on the crime of aggression (Kampala amendments), the Bridge to Development strategy to reduce extreme poverty and the Get a Job programme for youth employment. It encouraged Costa Rica to develop an action plan to implement the National Policy for Effective Equality between Women and Men 2018–2030 and to further combat human trafficking.
29. Tunisia noted that Costa Rica had strengthened its legislative and institutional human rights framework and its labour and social security systems. It welcomed national action to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals.
30. Ukraine welcomed the ratification by Costa Rica of almost all the universal and regional human rights instruments, the reaffirmation of its commitment to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals and the development of the National Policy for Effective Equality between Women and Men.
31. The United States of America commended the significant progress made by Costa Rica in reducing child labour and its work to address the situation of migrants and asylum seekers. It encouraged the Government to improve legal processes for those seeking refuge.

32. Uruguay welcomed the ratification by Costa Rica of the International Labour Organization (ILO) Domestic Workers Convention, 2011 (No. 189) and the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, as well as its efforts to promote gender equity.
33. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela welcomed the adoption of the national policy for a society free from racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia. It noted the remaining challenges, such as the persistent discrimination against and stigmatization of indigenous peoples, people of African descent, migrants and other vulnerable groups.
34. Yemen welcomed the efforts of the Government to promote the rights of women and children, to provide social protection and to promote economic development in the country.
35. Afghanistan congratulated Costa Rica for its progress in the implementation of the recommendations from the previous cycle and commended it for the amendment of the Constitution in 2015 to recognize the country's multi-ethnic and multicultural nature.
36. Albania welcomed the efforts of Costa Rica to modernize its labour legislation, its commitment to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals and its significant developments in gender equality. Albania encouraged Costa Rica to continue its efforts to eliminate violence against women.
37. Algeria welcomed the adoption of the 2014–2015 national policy against racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia and the actions taken to combat poverty and mitigate the effects of the unequal distribution of wealth.
38. Angola congratulated Costa Rica on its strong commitment against racism, its promotion of women's rights and its role in the protection of biodiversity and encouraged it to continue its efforts to reduce unemployment and trafficking in weapons.
39. Argentina congratulated Costa Rica on the adoption of the National Policy for Effective Equality between Women and Men 2018–2030 as the basis for compliance with the Sustainable Development Goals.
40. Armenia praised Costa Rica for being the first country to sign a national pact for the Sustainable Development Goals. It welcomed the adoption of the Comprehensive Migration Policy 2013–2023 and of measures to promote gender equality.
41. Australia recognized the efforts of Costa Rica to improve its national human rights framework, making it a regional leader in that regard. While the progress it had made since the second cycle review was commendable, further action was needed.
42. The delegation of Costa Rica noted that the country had increasingly become a country of asylum. It was making great efforts to ensure that migrants and refugees could fully integrate and to provide them with better living conditions. It had signed or ratified several international instruments on the matter, including the ILO Domestic Workers Convention and the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration. The implementation of the Comprehensive Migration Policy 2013–2023 had resulted in substantive progress in the promotion and protection of the rights of migrants and refugees, including on their access to work, education and social security. In order to better protect migrants' rights, Costa Rica had also established an Administrative Migration Tribunal, the third of its kind in the world.
43. Human trafficking was regulated in the General Act on Migration, with penalties ranging from 4 to 8 years' imprisonment, and 10 years in aggravated cases.
44. In 2015, the first article of the Constitution had been amended to recognize the multi-ethnic and multicultural character of Costa Rican society. Other legal instruments had also been updated to ensure that public investment programmes respected the differences within and the needs of its diverse society.
45. Despite those improvements, promoting the human rights of the indigenous peoples present in the country remained a challenge. In order to make the right to free, prior and informed consent operational, Costa Rica had established, through a participatory process, a consultation mechanism in line with the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of indigenous peoples. In 2019, the Government had also adopted guidelines for the participatory and intercultural development of public policy for indigenous peoples 2019–2024.

46. In order to accelerate the restitution of ancestral lands occupied by non-indigenous people, Costa Rica had developed the National Plan for the Recovery of the Indigenous Territories of Costa Rica 2016–2022, which was currently in its first phase of implementation. The delegation strongly condemned the murder on 18 March 2019 of the indigenous leader Sergio Rojas Ortiz. The President had requested an immediate investigation into that homicide in order to bring the perpetrators to justice.

47. Since the previous review, Costa Rica had taken a number of steps to improve the quality of life of people of African descent. In 2014, it had created the Presidential Commissioner for issues related to persons of African descent to coordinate government action to promote the development of the population of African descent. In 2015, it had launched the International Decade for People of African Descent and the National Recognition, Justice and Development of Afro-descendants Plan 2015–2018.

48. Azerbaijan underlined the progress made by Costa Rica in implementing the recommendations from the previous review cycle, particularly by ratifying several international treaties and amending its Constitution to recognize the multi-ethnic and multicultural character of the State.

49. The Bahamas noted concerns about the conservation of maritime areas. It welcomed the leadership of Costa Rica in presiding over the 2017 United Nations conference to negotiate a legally binding instrument to prohibit nuclear weapons, leading towards their total elimination.

50. Barbados commended Costa Rica for its promotion of human rights, as reflected in the National Policy for Effective Equality between Women and Men 2018–2030, the education regulations and policies aimed at combating racism.

51. Belarus noted the strengthening by Costa Rica of its human rights institutions and its cooperation with OHCHR. It also noted challenges, including regarding migrants and refugees, discrimination against persons with disabilities and indigenous peoples.

52. Belgium acknowledged the progress made by Costa Rica since the previous review cycle. However, it considered that further progress could be made to protect human rights in accordance with international human rights treaties.

53. Benin noted the recognition by Costa Rica of the multi-ethnic and multicultural nature of the country, the Labour Law Reform Act and the prohibition of all discrimination at work, and the implementation of a national development plan.

54. Bhutan noted with appreciation the ratification by Costa Rica of the ILO Domestic Workers Convention and of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, as well as the Constitutional amendment to guarantee respect for cultural diversity.

55. The Plurinational State of Bolivia valued the recognition by Costa Rica of the multi-ethnic and multicultural nature of the country, which was now reflected in the Constitution, and welcomed the efforts to establish a mechanism for consultation with indigenous peoples.

56. Brazil commended the adoption of the law promoting the personal autonomy of persons with disabilities and the declaration that combating violence against women was a national priority. It also welcomed the progress in the production of disaggregated statistical data.

57. Bulgaria noted with appreciation the adoption of the 2014–2025 national policy for a society free from racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia and its 2015–2018 action plan. It commended Costa Rica for its outstanding environmental record.
