Charitable institute for protecting social victims
Afghanistan

Mr. President

The subject of women has always been one of the main issues in international human circles. The third MDG stresses on equality between men and women. In order to reach peace and security in a world free of war, insecurity and discrimination, it is conditional to the recognition of the rights of half of the population of the world which are women.

Mr. President

While commending the measures the afghan government has taken in the setting up of the eradication of violence against women and also the creation of the ministry for women's affairs as part of the realization of the inherent rights of human, we call upon more extensive participation of women in the administrative and judicial system and calls upon the afghan government to fulfill the following:

1. promote the access of women to employment
2. Letting the ministry of women's affairs to participate in legislation proceedings.
3. The setting of comprehensive guidelines for the elimination of gender discrimination, employment oriented.

Mr. President

The violence against women is also a subject of concern which is strongly influenced by Taliban. Therefore we call upon the afghan government to as well as the adoption of security measures within society, to also fulfill the following for the protection of women and girls:

1. setting practical solutions for the eradication of violence against women
2. reviewing of education text books in schools with the aim of information dissemination on women's rights
3. increasing public awareness on action against domestic violence

Thanks you
