Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its fifth session from 4 to 15 May 2009. The review of Dominican Republic was held at the 3rd meeting on 1 December 2009. The delegation of Dominican Republic was headed by Dr. Max Puig, Secretary of State for Labour. At its meeting held on 3 December 2009, the Working Group adopted the present report on Dominican Republic.
2. On 7 September 2009, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Dominican Republic: Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bangladesh and Argentina.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1, the following documents were issued for the review of Dominican Republic:
  - (a) A national report submitted / written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/6/ DOM/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/6/DOM/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR, in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/6/DOM/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Germany, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Czech Republic, Denmark, Latvia, Switzerland, The Netherlands was transmitted to Dominican Republic through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. SUMMARY OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE REVIEW PROCESS

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. In the 3rd meeting, on 1 December 2009, the Secretary of State for Labour opened his statement indicating that the national report is the result of intensive efforts undertaken by the Government with great responsibility and broad participation.
6. He recalled that the Dominican Republic has ratified the major international human rights conventions, which are part of the nation's legal framework. He added that the Government is carrying out the necessary studies to promptly determine the possibility of accession to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT) and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (ICRMW).
7. The Secretary of State for Labour highlighted that since the 1960s significant progress has been made in the field of human rights. However, it is important to bear in mind that this progressive improvement takes place against a structural backdrop of long-standing poverty and immigration. In this context, he subsequently presented some of the achievements of recent years and referred to persisting challenges.

8. With regards to the issues of documentation and nationality, in 2004 the Government estimated that there were approximately 600,000 unregistered nationals. In order to rectify this situation the Late Registration Unit (Unidad de Declaraciones Tardías) was re-launched and in August 2007, Congress passed Act No. 218-07, which established a three-year amnesty for late birth registrations for nationals under the age of 16.

9. The delegation explained that in April 2007, a birth registration system, known as the Immigration Registry, was established for children born in the Dominican Republic to non-resident women. It added that in cases where the nationality of a newborn child or minor is unknown the State confers Dominican nationality upon that person, in accordance with the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

10. The delegation stressed that discrimination due to race, nationality, gender, creed or age is not accepted in the Dominican Republic. The 1997 amended Criminal Code makes discrimination or attacks against another person a criminal offence. In addition, any person who feels that he or she has been discriminated against or that his or her rights have been violated has preferential access to the courts.

11. The Dominican Republic mentioned that women enjoy equal rights and privileges with men and that with a view to guaranteeing and strengthening these rights the principle of positive discrimination has been introduced in the political arena. To this end, it was established that, by law, at least one third of candidates for elective posts should be women.

12. With regards to the rights to public security, personal security and due process before the law, the State indicated that there have been no reports of political crimes or disappearances between 2003 and 2008. However, it regretted that during that same period, there were reports of private individuals' involvement in summary executions. There have also been reports of members of the police and armed forces involvement in physically abusing detainees. The Government has taken penal action to counter these abuses and to ensure that they are not repeated.

13. The Dominican Republic highlighted that in 1997 a reform process was initiated with a view to guaranteeing the independence of the judiciary. It added that special emphasis has been placed on the training and human rights instruction of members of the armed forces and police corps. In addition, it was stressed that the new penitentiary model protects prisoners' dignity and that prison facilities are currently being upgraded in order to reduce overcrowding.

14. The delegation indicated that the persistence of trafficking in persons and people smuggling is of great concern. A series of measures were undertaken by the Government in order to combat this problem, including, amongst others, the establishment of the National Commission to Combat Human Trafficking and People-Smuggling, which has the task of developing a national strategy in this area. The delegation added that the Inter-Agency Commission to Combat Abuse and Sexual Exploitation for Commercial Purposes joins forces with the Public Prosecutor's Office and the Special Prosecutor for Children and Youth in combating the sexual exploitation of adolescents in tourist areas. It also emphasized that trafficking in girls and women, particularly when it is for purposes of sexual exploitation, is taken very seriously and that networks of traffickers operating in the country are pursued by a wide array of government and civil society organizations.

15. According to the delegation, there are an estimated 900,000 to 1.2 million illegal migrants in the Dominican Republic, mostly of Haitian nationality. It stressed that the Government does not encourage, benefit from or remain indifferent to this illegal migratory flow, which has many consequences. It also highlighted that a number of steps have been taken to regulate this flow, including, inter alia, the passage of Act No. 137-03 on human trafficking and migrant-smuggling and of Migration Act No. 285-04.

16. The delegation recognized that despite the fact that gender equality prevails in the Dominican Republic, problems such as domestic violence and violence particularly targeting women persist. The Government has therefore adopted the National Gender Equity and Equality Plan to promote the rights of women. To ensure that the Plan is followed up, it has also established gender equity and development offices in all Government branches.

17. On the subject of childrens' rights, the Delegation reported that the Labour Code and subsequent regulations issued by the Ministry of Labour prohibit the employment of children under 14, and protect children under 18 from the worst forms of child labour. The State regretted that violations of the law and regulations in this area still occur.

18. It added that under the national strategic plan for the eradication of the worst forms of child labour, 27,300 children have already been removed from risky situations and work exploitation. It also reported that the authorities have launched an additional programme, which has achieved a significant decrease in the number of children and teenagers exposed and subjected to the worst forms of child labour.

19. In its efforts to ensure that all minors attend school, in 2003 the Ministry of Education authorized undocumented school-aged children to attend the compulsory basic years of education. Furthermore, a program that offers subsidies to needy families in exchange for acceptance that their children of school age will attend school has been established and benefited more than 208,000 families in 2008.

20. With regards to the right to work, the Dominican Republic stressed that all workers are free to organize and join the union of their choice and added that the Labour Code establishes a system of labour tribunals to handle disputes.

21. The State referred to reports from a number of NGOs, indicating that between 2003 and 2008, most of the undocumented Haitian workers employed in various farming and construction ventures did not assert their rights for fear of being dismissed or deported. The State explained that for every reported case there are dozens of counter-examples.

22. The Government indicated that its priorities in giving effect to the right to work are: the creation of more and better jobs; the eradication of forced labour and child labour; and the promotion of social dialogue.

23. Although the Dominican Republic has not been able to eradicate poverty, it has implemented important programs in this area, such as the programme "Eating comes First" which has become an integral part of the Solidarity Programme. By means of its electronic debit card, the Solidarity Programme ensures that citizens living in extreme poverty have their education, health, transport and nutritional needs met and that the elderly are cared for.

24. The Dominican Republic indicated that the establishment of the new Social Security System has been one of the most significant achievements in recent years. The coverage under the subsidized family health insurance scheme for the poor has risen from 65,000 beneficiaries in mid-2004 to 1,224,643 people nationwide. In addition, the Dominican Republic emphasized that the undocumented population can benefit from free medical care.

25. The great challenge regarding education in the country is related to its quality, since the Dominican Republic has the second-highest school enrolment rate in Latin America, with 91.1 per cent of children between 6 and 18 attending school. The delegation highlighted that a 10-year plan for the period 2008-2018 has been elaborated for all levels of education. It also stressed that the Government has supported a gradual increase in the budget for the education sector.

26. Referring to vulnerable groups, the Government indicated that, despite efforts made over the last 40 years to counter poverty in the countryside, rural dwellers are the most vulnerable social group when it comes to unequal distribution of opportunities and wealth.

27. As regards food security, not even the second part of the first of the eight Millennium Development Goals — halving the proportion of people suffering from hunger in the country— has been achieved. The Government is developing programs with a view to resolving this issue in a satisfactory manner.

28. In relation to the rights of migrants, the Dominican Republic emphasized that it was firmly and resolutely opposed to any kind of shady arrangement or abuse at the expense of migrant workers, particularly illegal ones. The authorities are faced with the challenge of regulating migration so that migrant workers are legal, do not exceed the supply or demand for labour, contribute positively and do not become an instrument of unfair business practice or an unsustainable burden on society. The delegation added that the General Directorate on Migration has laid down the terms under which illegal Haitians can be repatriated in the protocol which Haiti and the Dominican Republic signed in 1999.

29. The delegation recalled that the Dominican Republic will soon promulgate a new Constitution, marking a milestone in the history of the country. The new constitutional text is modern and rights based, and will contribute to solving institutional problems. Moreover, it significantly expands the catalogue of fundamental rights and incorporates the institution of ombudsman.

30. Taken together, the achievements of the past few decades show that progress in overcoming the obstacles that prevent men and women of all ages, social classes, races and nationalities from living together in dignity depends directly on an active undertaking by the Government and society to protect and promote basic rights.

31. In this context, the formal commitment made by the Dominican Republic is to continue to put into effect each and every initiative designed to foster compliance with all its national and international human rights commitments.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

32. During the inter-active dialogue, statements were made by 38 delegations. A number of delegations thanked the Dominican Republic for its commitment to the universal periodic review process and its comprehensive, self-critical national report, noting that the report was the result of an inclusive broad-based process with the contributions of the civil society organisations.

33. Algeria welcomed the Minister of Labour of the government of the Dominican Republic, and his accompanying delegation. Algeria commended the national report for uncompromisingly recognizing that inequality was a historical characteristic of the socio-economic makeup of the Dominican Republic, and that it underlined social exclusion of national and foreigners.

34. While noting the positive steps already taken by Dominican Republic in combating violence against women, human trafficking and extrajudicial killings, Turkey recalled that certain areas still require more attention and action. Turkey mentioned as examples the high rate of population living below the poverty line; or the number of irregular migrants in the state. Nevertheless, Turkey praised the efforts made toward the elimination of impunity, the fight against racial discrimination and xenophobia, and the ongoing screening and training of all law enforcement personnel and national security forces.

35. Belgium referred to the immigration flow of a large number of Haitians, which Belgium recognized as a major challenge. It welcomed a number of initiatives taken by the Dominican authorities in this area, such as the “zero tolerance” policy concerning violations of the rights of migrants. It was however alarmed by the general treatment of asylum seekers and refugees and informed that the Dominican Republic had not fully followed up the comments and requests coming from the Special Rapporteur on Racism, the Independent Expert on Minority, and the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. Belgium stressed the importance of raising awareness among public officials to combat racism, and to reprimand the racist actions undertaken by these agents. Belgium inquired about the measures that have been planned to take to combat this phenomenon amongst public authorities?

36. Canada welcomed the ratification by the state of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. Canada noted with concern reports of discriminatory denial of the right to nationality to Dominicans of Haitian descent. Canada also recognized the efforts of the state to combat human trafficking of children, women and men and appreciated its cooperation with Canada in the arrest of human traffickers.

37. Egypt commended the creation of new mechanism within the Offices of the Ombudsmen and Dispute Mediation Centres in cooperation with the Office of the Attorney General and civil society organizations. It highlighted the establishment in October 2007 of the National Commission to Combat Human Trafficking and People–Smuggling. It also welcomed the 2006-2007 undertaking of a national consultation on excellence in education and the drawing up a 10 year plan for all levels of education in the country and its commitment to put the plan into operation over the period of 2008 - 2018.

38. Brazil recognized the significant efforts made in the area of human rights, reflected by the establishment of the Interagency Commission for Human Rights and the Institute of promotion and protection of Human Rights and by the prohibition of corporal punishment at schools and in the judiciary system. Brazil congratulated Dominican Republic for its launching of a national strategy on social inclusion. It welcomed the establishment of a bilateral commission between Dominican Republic and Republic of Haiti. However, Brazil expressed its concerns with regard to issues related to gender violence and migrants.

39. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland noted the absence of a national human rights institution in line with the Paris principles. While welcoming the progress made in modernising the prison system, it remained concerned about problematic conditions in the old style prisons, including overcrowding, poor hygiene and criminality, and poorly trained personnel. It is concerned about the allegations of unlawful killings and increasing violence committed by Dominican security forces, and the absence of independent and transparent investigations. With regard to racism and discrimination against Haitians and Dominicans of Haitians descent, the United Kingdom recalled the importance of equality to all in the access to healthcare, education and freedom of movement.

40. Cuba noted positively the efforts being carried out to address the combat and eliminate all forms of discrimination, such as affirmative actions establishing quotas for women to be elected for public positions, the adoption of a National Plan for Gender Equality and measures to establish preferential access to the Courts for victims of any type of discrimination. Cuba further noted with interest the programmes being implemented to address the problem of exclusion and lack of attention to the most impoverished sectors of the population, in particular the programme "Comer es Primero".

41. Spain noted the efforts made by the Dominican Republic in the area of fundamental rights and freedoms. Furthermore, Spain welcomed the abolition of the death penalty and expressed its hope that the Dominican Republic will ratify the Second Optional Protocol the ICCPR. Spain inquired about whether the government planned to broaden the campaign of gender equality? And, whether the government will take measures in cases of abuses perpetrated by security forces.

42. France inquired about the measures that the authorities intend to implement in order to cope with the increasing of arbitrary detention, summary executions, the use of excessive force by law enforcement officials, and also the impunity they seem to benefit from. While acknowledging the significant progress accomplished in the area of the Rights of the Women, France added that domestic violence was still at a very alarming level and the units of fighting violence against women seemed to be not very effective due to the lack of receptivity of the police officers to this subject. Under these circumstances, what additional measures do the authorities intend to implement to guarantee full respect of the rights of women? Referring to more than a million Haitian citizens living in the Dominican Republic, without documentation, which makes them particular vulnerable and exposes them to many forms of exploitation, France was very pleased that the Dominican government announced last June that they are launching a broad plan for the regularization, which is progressive and differentiated for Haitian workers, by providing them with resident permits and work permits. However it inquired about the stage of implementation of this plan?

43. The Netherlands welcomed the introduction of a zero tolerance policy and the investigations of human rights abuses and violations; and the human rights trainings provided to the police force. Despite the efforts of the government to promote women's rights, the Netherlands underlined the rate of women's death caused by gender-based violence. It also raised concerns about maternal death and questioned the state about existing measures to treat post-abortion complications, and guarantees for the non-prosecution of women. The Netherlands finally noted the positive response of the state to requests for invitation of mandate holders.

44. Mexico recognized the efforts undertaken by the government in the area of human rights. It noted the important legal efforts in the area of gender equality, the improving of the penitentiary system, the combating of corruption, trafficking and smuggling of persons. Mexico welcomed the governments' willingness to work with the special procedures of human rights council in responding positively to special procedures visit requests.

45. The Dominican Republic thanked all delegations for their statements and issues raised, as well as for the recognition of the efforts made by the Dominican Republic not only in the preparation of the national report, but also in specific areas. Without denying the difficulties and obstacles, the Universal Periodic Review is intended to help States in order to address them.

46. The delegation reiterated that the Dominican Republic is working towards the aim of ratifying CAT and ICRMW.

47. On the issue of visits by international human rights mechanisms to the country, the Dominican Republic noted that it remains open to receiving visits by all international human rights mechanisms. The delegation indicated that these visits are extremely beneficial; since these can help them focus attention on issues they might have difficulty addressing.

48. On the issue of migrant workers, the delegation noted that the Dominican Republic is both a sending and a receiving country. Regarding migrant Haitian workers specifically, the delegation wished to put the question in perspective, noting that the Dominican Republic and Haiti are the only cases of two sovereign States sharing one island. The economic trends in the last few decades have led to a situation where the two States have the same population, but the Dominican Republic has a larger territory. In addition, whereas both are developing countries, the Dominican Republic is already a medium income country, while Haiti is a least developed country. Despite the fact that both countries have the same population, the Dominican Republic economy is six times larger than the Haitian economy. There is a situation where the population of the country with a lower level of development has to move towards the country where the economic level is better, this is a universal phenomenon. The Dominican Republic does not encourage immigration towards its territory. Documented migrant workers come voluntarily into the Dominican Republic. Last year, the Dominican Republic issued 76,000 visas to Haitians visitors. This figure is higher than the total number of visas issued by the United States of America and the European Union to Haitians citizens in the same year. The fact is that when these migrant workers come to the Dominican Republic they find themselves in a situation where more than 40 percent of the people are living below the levels defined by the United Nations corresponding to poverty. While an effort is being made, more than 13 percent of the budget of the Ministry of Health is being allocated for the care of Haitian nationals residing in the Dominican Republic. In fact, the Dominican Republic is one of the countries that provide more assistance to Haiti, in terms of health and education assistance to Haitian nationals residing in the country.

49. It is also important to highlight that the Dominican Republic has taken measures, interpreted by some as being restrictive, concerning the recognition of the rights of the Haitian people and the civil registry system. The system in the Dominican Republic has had shortcomings in the past, which the Central Electoral Board (CEB) has tried to correct. For example, the Dominican Republic has put forward a resolution aimed at detecting documents that are falsified. As of 2007, 2416 false identity documents have been identified, of which only 72 or 3 percent, correspond to nationals from the Haitian Republic. The measures taken by the CEB are general measures in their nature and they are not targeting any segment of the population in particular.

50. Switzerland applauded the long consultation process during the drafting of the report. Switzerland noted with concern that despite the fact that freedom of expression is enshrined in the Constitution, there are allegations of intimidation of journalists and human rights defenders and these actions are on the rise. With regard to violence against women, Switzerland took note of the willingness expressed by national authorities to eradicate this phenomenon, and to adopt a national plan for equality. However, physical violence against women has increased drastically in recent years. Domestic violence has reached such a point that the media speak of it with horror.

51. Venezuela commended on the efforts made by the Interagency Human Rights Commission. Venezuela recognized the actions undertaken by the Dominican Republic to ensure the right for education, which was given highest priority in the Dominican annual budget. Venezuela particularly praised the high enrolment rate in the school system in the Dominican Republic. It welcomed the positive prospects of the ten years plan for all educational levels.

52. While recalling the rate of population living below the poverty line, Azerbaijan commended the national measures taken by the Government to reduce poverty and food insecurity, especially the Solidarity Programme. Showing understanding with the huge immigration flow the state is facing, Azerbaijan praised the will of Dominican Republic to accede to the ICMW

53. The United States of America noted the Government's nation wide efforts to improve civil registration access and procedures. It remained concerned however by the major barriers Dominican of Haitian descent face in establishing their citizenship. Dominicans who lacked citizenship or identity documents faced obstacles in travelling both within and outside of the country. In addition persons who were undocumented could not obtain national identification (cedula) or a voting card. Persons without a cedilla had limited access to formal sector jobs, public higher education, marriage and birth registration, formal economy services such as banks and loans access to courts and judicial procedures and owing land or property.

54. Uruguay emphasized the efforts made by the Dominican Republic in the promotion and protection of human right, including the affirmative actions adopted to ensure female participation in public life and the implementation of programmes such as "Eating comes first" and "Solidarity". Uruguay recognized that geographic, political and socioeconomic factors, make the development of a migration policy a complex process and noted that Dominican Republic should continue strengthening measures aimed at protecting the principles of non-discrimination and the right to an identity among others. It inquired about Dominican Republic experiences in its efforts to combat child labour.

55. Slovenia commended the state for its efforts to comply with its international obligations. Slovenia questioned the state on its concrete plan to eliminate the discriminatory provisions present in the Civil Code. It raised concerns about the existing prohibition of abortion and wondered if measures were foreseen against the development of a black market of illegal abortion. Slovenia asked what was planned against child labour and violence against children, and against under-resourced education.

56. Nicaragua highlighted the efforts and progress made by Dominican Republic in modernizing its state, giving it an institutional and normative framework which meets the needs of its society. Nicaragua congratulated the Dominican Republic for the process of the constitutional reform carried out which is consolidating the Dominican democracy.

57. Italy commended the growing awareness towards the promotion and protection of human rights and the adoption of new legislation over the last years. Italy formulated four recommendations to include in the school system appropriate measures in the field of human rights education, to increase the efforts to combat existing discrimination among children, to ratify and implement the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel and to ensure satisfactory prosecution of cases of gender-based violence.

58. Norway recalled the importance of independent national human rights institutions for the awareness of the implementation of human rights obligations. Norway raised concerns about the vulnerable situation of human rights defenders and journalists working in the defence of human rights, including rights of Haitian immigrants and Dominicans of Haitian origin. Norway was deeply concerned by the rate of women's death caused by gender based violence.

59. Germany referred to Human Rights Committee concern about reports of extrajudicial executions of prisoners in custody of the State and of the death at hands of National Police, the Armed Forces and officers of the National Drug Control Office owing to the excessive use of force. Germany was interested to know how the Government has addressed these concerns and in particular to learn more about programs of Human Rights training for the staff of the police and forces implemented in this regard.

60. The Holy See noted the ongoing process of consolidation of democratic institutions, among which the establishment of local prosecutor's offices to safeguard especially the rights of women and minors; or the application of a zero tolerance policy in cases of mistreatment or violation of rights of illegal migrants. While appreciating the care of the state to protect children, the Holy See remained concerned that many under the age of five are without birth certificates. The Holy See drew attention to the trafficking and exploitation of persons, especially children, and wondered which measures were taken to confront the problem.

61. In response to comments made on the situation of women, the delegation indicated that it fully shared the concerns conveyed by various delegations. In 2000, the Dominican Republic created a Ministry of Work for Women that is working on the Equity Plan. However, they are extremely concerned by the high levels of violence against women. Like in other areas they must work on education and make efforts to provide for justice. They appreciate the suggestions with regard to setting up a database with the breakdown of the population.

62. Dominican Republic reiterated its concerns about the violence exercised by law enforcement security forces. The issue should, however, be contextualized. The Dominican Republic is facing an increase in crime along with a rising problem of drug trafficking. The Dominican Republic is a transit country for drugs, going from producing countries to the main consumers and markets. This creates many difficulties. Deaths caused by law enforcement officers are treated as homicides and the main parties involved are subject to judicial actions and prosecuted. The delegation made reference to recent cases in this regard.

63. Referring to the issue of child labour, the delegation noted that this is an issue that is often accepted by certain parts of the population, perhaps because of poverty and the social fabric. Action in this regard needs to be taken not only in terms of the legal framework but also in through education. The last study available, an IPEC/ILO study conducted in 2000, shows that there were about 434,000 working children. Current estimates show that numbers have decreased to 156,000, mainly as a result of programmes such as 'Eating Comes First' and the Solidarity Programme, but they are not satisfied yet. The Dominican Republic is making efforts within the hemispheric agenda to eliminate the worst forms of child labour by the year 2015 and child labour by 2020.

64. Some delegations made reference to a request for a visit to the Dominican Republic made by the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary. The delegation indicated that the Dominican Republic remains open to visits by United Nations human rights mechanisms and has no objections to this visit. A request in this regard should be made through the official channels by the Special Rapporteur on summary executions to visit the country.

65. The delegation indicated that the Dominican Republic fully shares the concerns expressed concerning issues related to human rights education in various areas, including the need to develop a comprehensive human rights education strategy and a culture of respect for human rights. The delegation noted the importance of setting the necessary legal framework and conducting efforts to sensitize and provide human rights education to the population in order to address particular problems, such as for example, racism, xenophobia, violence against women, violence against children and the rights of persons with disabilities. The Dominican Republic reiterated its serious commitment in this regard and noted that there is a need to work hand in hand with all members of society and countries around the world.

66. Bosnia and Herzegovina noted with satisfaction the ratification of numerous core human rights instruments and inquired about the obstacles to ratify the Convention against Torture and the International Convention on Rights of Migrants Workers. It also asked the delegation about steps being taken to fill the position of Ombudsperson and Assistant Ombudsperson for Children and Youth, established by Law in 2008. With regard to the minority issues and certain groups in Dominican society such as Dominicans of Haitian descent and Haitian, affected by the application of the General Law on Migration, it inquired about the Government's efforts designed to overcome the consequences of the mentioned Law on the vulnerable groups.

67. Bolivia congratulated the Dominican Republic for the high rate of school enrollment, as mentioned in the national report. It noted that Dominican Republic is a developing country with limited natural resources, but with the will to address obstacles with the support of the international community, as reflected in the allocation of public resources, such as in the area of education and health. Bolivia further recognized the implementation of the National Plan to combat the smuggling and illegal trafficking of migrants.

68. Peru recognized the efforts of Dominican Republic in favour of women, such as the Electoral Law 12.2000 which increased to 33 percent the quota for women to public positions and hoped that the legislative measures will result in the short-term in a higher representation of women in the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. Peru asked the delegation to provide more information on the impact of the programmes 'Subsidio Escolar' and 'Comer es Primero'. Peru also asked if Dominican Republic is considering extending a permanent invitation to the special procedures mechanisms.

69. Jamaica was pleased to note the emphasis of the state to protect the human rights of vulnerable groups, Jamaica congratulated the state for having the second highest school enrolment rate in Latin America. Jamaica also recognized the efforts made to combat human trafficking and to improve victim protection mechanisms; and to promote and protect civil and political rights, such as reforming and guaranteeing the independence of judiciary and providing human rights training to law enforcement officials.

70. The United Arab Emirates noted the progress achieved in the field of women rights, especially in achieving equality between man and women before the law. It expressed its appreciation for the important initiative to set up a Ministry of women rights in 1990. Several practical steps in favour of women were also adopted, such as the adoption electoral law 12.200, which raised the quota of female candidates to elected posts to 33%; and act number 13.200, that stressed that application for positions, such as commissioners and deputy commissioners, should be off alternate sexes. UAE inquired about the outcomes of the national plan to encourage equality between man and women? And the equality and development offices set up in all government branches to ensure the follow up of this plan?

71. The Maldives congratulated the state for its commitment to human rights, testified by its ratification of most core human rights convention. Noting that gender-based violence remains a problem in the country and often goes unreported, the Maldives wondered if the state had given consideration to inviting the Special Rapporteur on violence against women for advice on steps to eliminate violence against women.

72. Chile congratulated Dominican Republic for its report, in which progress made in recent years, as well as problems and challenges are highlighted. Chile noted with satisfaction the important progress made with regard to the human rights of women, children and migrants, underscoring the institutionalization of the Ministries of Women's and of Youth Affairs, the National Gender Equality Plan, the reduction of the number of children and adolescents exposed to the worst form of child labour and the adoption of laws and action plans to combat human trafficking and migrant smuggling.

73. Colombia made reference to the progress made for the strengthening of the institutional framework for the protection of human rights and asked the delegation to share more information on the establishment of the 'Fiscalías Barriales' and their impact with regard to facilitating access to justice to the most vulnerable sectors. Colombia congratulated Dominican Republic for its important efforts and progress made as a result of the penitentiary reform and access to health services by the population.

74. Ecuador highlighted the efforts and commitment in the promotion of all human rights and encouraged the Dominican Republic to consider developing and implementing a National Human Rights Plan, as well as establishing a national human rights institution, in accordance with the Paris Principles, as highlighted in the concluding observations of treaty bodies. Ecuador expressed its sincere willingness to support all efforts of the Dominican Republic in the promotion and protection of human rights and reiterated its readiness for cooperating in this regard.

75. Latvia noted with satisfaction the domestic culture of the state which ensured the respect for fundamental freedoms. It also noted that the Dominican Republic has ratified many core international human rights treaties. Latvia referred to the issue of standing invitations to special procedures, an issue that we also addressed as a written question before the UPR session.

76. Guatemala welcomed the incorporation in the new Constitution to be adopted, of norms for the promotion and protection of human rights. Guatemala asked Dominican Republic to provide more information and share information in its good practices with regard to the reform and modernization process of the penitentiary system. It also asked for information on access by undocumented migrants to health services, housing, education, work and social security services, as well as on the solidarity pension system.

77. Nigeria noted the significant achievements recorded by the state, despite the numerous challenges it faces and commended the state for being a party to a substantial number of the core international human rights instruments and for having cooperated with various United Nations human rights mechanisms. Nigeria noted the continuing exclusion of persons and a proliferation of racism on the part of some individuals. It questioned the state about existing mechanisms to address these practices and the recorded successes of their implementation.

78. Haiti referred to the Dominican Republic, as a country with which the Republic of Haiti shares an island in the Caribbean. These were two countries which futures were inextricably linked. In fact, the Dominican Republic continued to host a major inflow of Haitians who had contributed in a substantial way to the growth of the Dominican economy. Haiti took note of the efforts made and the measures taken by the Dominican authorities to promote and protect human rights in the country. It had above all noted the major difficulties encountered by Haitians, both in their relation with Dominican police men, army officers and soldiers, and certain segments Dominican population, which often gave rise to regrettable incidents linked to obtaining of an identity document and access to basic services.

79. Ghana commended the creative and affirmative actions for women and the opening of neighbourhood prosecutor's offices for a greater access to the justice system. On migration issues, Ghana welcomed the Act on migrant smuggling and human trafficking, and the appliance of a zero tolerance policy in cases of mistreatment of illegal migrants by inspectors. Noting the condemnation, dismissals and disciplinary sanctions of police officers, Ghana questioned about the impact of this policy on the society in general and on foreigners in particular. Ghana also appreciated the openness with which the state has discussed its challenges, such as the failure of properly addressing the issues of discrimination and racism.

80. Morocco welcomed the new text of the constitution which took on board several question relating to human rights, above all the protection of the rights vulnerable category such as women, children and undocumented migrants. It congratulated the government of the Dominican Republic for their program "Eating Comes First" launched in 2002, which alleviated the hunger problem and was aimed at assisting families in situations of extreme poverty. It inquired about other programs or initiatives which are part of the program to combat poverty, particularly in the area of human development. Morocco congratulated the government of the Dominican Republic on adopting a national education plan for the period 2008-2018 and inquired whether it had a Human Rights Education component to it.

81. The Dominican Republic thanked all delegations for their questions and comments, and reiterated its serious commitment to promote all human rights. It also reaffirmed its commitment to ratify/adhere to Conventions mentioned throughout the interactive dialogue, as well as their openness to receive visits by different United Nations human rights mechanisms.

82. The delegation indicated that there is full freedom of expression in the country, and that there is no persecution for offenses, such as expression of opinion, nor are there any journalists imprisoned for this purpose.

83. Regarding the high number of undocumented persons residing in the country mentioned by some delegations, the Dominican Republic made reference to experiences shared by other countries in this regard. It also recalled that plans for the identification and registration of undocumented persons are being developed, with the aim of regularizing their migratory status.

84. Concerning the issue of nationality, the delegation noted that the law does not have retroactive effect, and therefore persons who have acquired Dominican Republic nationality cannot lose it. It further noted that there is no discrimination in the application of the law, even if there might be some isolated instances in this regard.

85. The Dominican Republic further reiterated its commitment to address specific issues in which they have recognized difficulties, such as in the area of violence against women, the situation of children and child labour, the same goes there. The delegation also noted that it is their goal to address the issue of executions as well.

86. The delegation thanked Haiti for their statement and indicated that both countries are working together. The Dominican Republic made an appeal for the wish of both countries to move forward in the community of nations to be supported by all other countries of the world.

9. Consider the signing and ratification of ICRMW, as well as the consequent and gradual adaptation of national legislation in accordance with the standards contained in that Convention (Uruguay);
10. Continue making progress by ratifying ICRMW (Colombia);
11. Ratify the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and sign and ratify the Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons (Canada);
12. Accede to instruments which are conducive to making an effective contribution to combating corruption, to support the Strategic Plan for Transparency, Ethics and the Prevention of Corruption 2009 -2012; in particular consider the possibility of taking inspiration from existing models of institutions in certain countries to establish a body to combat corruption and to accede to the United Nations Convention against Corruption (Algeria);
13. Improve cooperation with the United Nations treaty bodies by agreeing on timelines for submitting overdue reports (Norway);
14. Extend an open and permanent invitation to all United Nations special procedures (Brazil; Chile; Latvia), in addition to the existing cooperation (Brazil);
15. Consider favourably the request for a visit by the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions (Norway; Netherlands);
16. Consider establishing (Egypt)/create (France)/adopt measures which are conducive to the creation of (Mexico)/expedite the creation of (Peru) an independent national human rights institution in conformity with the Paris Principles (Egypt; France; Mexico; Norway; Peru), as recommended by the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (Norway);
17. Establish an independent body to deal with complaints and investigations concerning impunity of the forces of law and order when they carry out heinous actions, and train the police to use force in accordance with international human rights standards (Belgium);
18. Establish an independent oversight body to investigate complaints of police abuse and human rights violations (Netherlands);
19. Include in the school system at all levels, appropriate measures in the field of human rights education, in accordance with the Plan of Action of the World Programme for Human Rights Education, including appropriate training of law enforcement officials (Italy);
20. Intensify programmes of human rights education with a view to fight racist prejudices and to start such programs already at school level (Germany);
21. Step up its efforts in the area of education and human rights training (Morocco);

22. Speed up the implementation of the Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [that Dominican Republic has committed to accede] (Morocco); and strengthen its approach in the area of migration by acceding to the ICMW and ask for the assistance of competent international institutions (Algeria);
  23. Ensure that all reports of human rights violations are investigated and that those suspected of violations are suspended from active duty and brought to justice (Netherlands);
  24. Strengthen the coordination between the National Police and the Public Prosecutor's office (Netherlands);
  25. Take all necessary measures to put an end to discrimination against gays, lesbians and transsexuals (France);
  26. Taking into account the determination of the Government to protect the right to life and the danger of the practice of illegal abortions, provide guarantees in legislation for the mental and physical integrity of women, especially children who have undesired pregnancies (Spain);
  27. Seek technical assistance in the field of violence against children (Slovenia);
  28. Increase the number of competent personnel in the Public Prosecutor's office working to combat violence against women (Netherlands);
  29. Make more efforts to guarantee the right of all children to be registered immediately after birth through a simplified and inclusive procedure, thus allowing them access to basic social services such as education and health (Uruguay);
  30. Encourage full implementation of the 2004 Children's Code, in the area of education, prevention and reinsertion (Spain);
  31. Establish mechanisms for dialog and raising awareness amongst the Dominican people, in the area of migration such as public campaigns and social fora of dialog in the areas of discrimination and racism, labour conditions, access to education and health care (Brazil);
89. The recommendations below did not enjoy the support of the Dominican Republic, and the Dominican Republic offers the following comments:
1. Ensure that appropriate legal frameworks are in place in line with the international conventions governing the issue of nationality (Canada); The Dominican Republic does not accept this recommendation, since nationality is already established in the Constitution and is not open to interpretation.
  2. Cancel all retroactive measures taken to replace the principle of jus soli with the principle of jus sanguinis for the acquisition of nationality (Spain); The Dominican Republic agrees that the law is not retroactive, but cannot accept the allegation that the Constitution is applied in a retroactive manner.

3. Take further steps to tackle impunity, including independent investigations of killings by security forces (United Kingdom); The judiciary in the Dominican Republic is constitutionally independent and its investigations and decisions are impartial and objective.
4. Adopt measures to ensure that Dominican of Haitian descent are not denied citizenship or access to civil and birth registration procedures and are not arbitrarily subject to retroactive cancellation of birth and identity documents (USA); This is not acceptable because, as noted earlier, application of the law is not retroactive in the Dominican Republic. In addition the Constitution of the Dominican Republic is not subject to interpretation as to who is or is not a Dominican.
5. Apply consistent and non-discriminatory citizenship policies and practices (Canada);

90. All conclusions and/or recommendations contained in the present report reflect the position of the submitting State(s) and /or the State under review thereon. They should not be construed as endorsed by the Working Group as a whole.
