HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL
Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review
Second session
Geneva, 5-16 May 2008

COMPILATION PREPARED BY THE OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR HUMAN RIGHTS, IN ACCORDANCE WITH PARAGRAPH 15(B) OF THE ANNEX TO HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL RESOLUTION 5/1

Guatemala***

The present report is a compilation of the information contained in the reports of treaty bodies, special procedures, including observations and comments by the State concerned, and other relevant official United Nations documents. It does not contain any opinions, views or suggestions on the part of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) other than those contained in public reports issued by OHCHR. It follows the structure of the general guidelines adopted by the Human Rights Council. The information included herein has been systematically referenced in endnotes. The periodicity of the review for the first cycle being four years, most of the documents used as reference are dated after 1 January 2004. In the absence of recent information, the latest available reports and documents have also been taken into consideration, unless they are outdated. Since this report only compiles information contained in official United Nations documents, lack of information or focus on specific issues may be due to non-ratification of a treaty and/or to a low level of interaction or cooperation with international human rights mechanisms.

1. ### B. Constitutional and legislative framework

2. CERD welcomed, inter alia, the promulgation of the Framework Law by which the Peace Agreements, and in particular the Agreement on Identity and Rights of Indigenous Peoples, become binding on the State.<sup>11</sup> However, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people noted that the implementation of the latter agreement is thwarted by insufficient institutional backing and budgetary allocations.<sup>12</sup>

C. Institutional and human rights infrastructure

3. The national human rights institution (NHRI) is the Ombudsperson and it was accredited with “A” status in 2002.<sup>13</sup> The High Commissioner recognized the efforts made as regards regulation and budgetary support to implement the Act establishing the National Institute of Forensic Science and the Prisons Act.<sup>14</sup> She also reported that the Centre for the Compilation, Analysis and Dissemination of Information on Crime was established as an analytical unit to help in crime investigation and encouraged Guatemala to continue strengthening the Department of Civil Intelligence.<sup>15</sup> Treaty bodies also noted the establishment of bodies such as the Presidential Secretariat for Women,<sup>16</sup> the Office for the Defence of Indigenous Women’s Rights,<sup>17</sup> the Presidential Commission for Discrimination and Racism against Indigenous Peoples in Guatemala (CODRISA),<sup>18</sup> and the Presidential Commission for Coordinating Executive Policy in the field of human rights (COPREDEH).<sup>19</sup> The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (CESCR) also noted the efforts made by Guatemala towards the implementation of the National Reparations Programme for victims of war.<sup>20</sup>

D. Policy measures

4. In 2007, the High Commissioner encouraged the Government, inter alia, to devise a plan for the implementation of the revised national policy on advancement and equal opportunity for Guatemalan women and also to make progress in implementing the policy of coexistence and the elimination of racism and racial discrimination.<sup>21</sup>

3. Cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

5. In 2005, at the request of the Government, the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights was established in Guatemala.<sup>36</sup> Cooperation between OHCHR and Guatemala is carried out mainly through the provision of technical assistance, including to the Government, the national human rights institution, the Public Prosecutor's Office, Congress, as well as to diverse civil society organizations. OHCHR has submitted three annual reports on its activities and on the human rights situation in Guatemala (2005, 2006 and 2007). OHCHR provides assistance to State institutions by carrying out analysis on legal, institutional and implementation issues, and also by contributing to the drafting of key legislation and public policies. Other areas of OHCHR work include increasing awareness of international human rights standards, promoting further interaction with United Nations human rights protection mechanisms, providing assistance on criminal prosecution and investigation issues and facilitating dialogue between different national and international actors on issues such as transitional justice and indigenous peoples' rights.<sup>37</sup> In May 2006, the High Commissioner undertook an official visit to Guatemala.<sup>38</sup> Guatemala made a voluntary contribution to support the work of the Office in 2004<sup>39</sup> and in 2007<sup>40</sup> contributed to the United Nations Voluntary Fund on Indigenous Populations.

B. Implementation of international human rights obligations

1. Equality and non-discrimination

6. CERD was deeply concerned at the extent to which racism and racial discrimination against the Maya, Xinca and Garifuna peoples is entrenched within the territory of Guatemala and at the inadequacy of public policies to eliminate racial discrimination.<sup>41</sup> This concern was echoed by the High Commissioner.<sup>42</sup> CERD, while welcoming the information provided about the Office of the Human Rights Prosecutor, which investigates offences involving discrimination and racism, noted that of the 79 cases brought, only 1 resulted in conviction and sentence.<sup>43</sup> CERD recommended that Guatemala adopt specific legislation classifying as a punishable act any dissemination of ideas based on notions of superiority or racial hatred, incitement to racial discrimination and violent acts directed against indigenous peoples and persons of African descent in Guatemala.<sup>44</sup>

7. The persistence and pervasiveness of patriarchal attitudes and deeply rooted stereotypes regarding the roles and responsibilities of women and men in the family and society was of concern to CEDAW, as they constitute a significant impediment to the participation of women in decision-making at all levels and are a root cause of women's disadvantaged position in all spheres of life.<sup>45</sup> CEDAW encouraged Guatemala to ensure that a definition encompassing both direct and indirect discrimination in line with article 1 of the Convention is explicitly reflected in all appropriate legislation and to include effective sanctions and remedies for the violation of rights by public and private actors.<sup>46</sup> CEDAW also urged Guatemala, inter alia, to amend discriminatory provisions in the Civil, Criminal and Labour Codes so as to bring them into conformity with article 2 of the Convention.<sup>47</sup>

8. Noting that the majority of the population are indigenous, CEDAW expressed concern about the situation of indigenous women who lack enjoyment of their human rights and are vulnerable to multiple forms of discrimination.<sup>48</sup> The Committee called upon Guatemala to ensure, inter alia, that indigenous women have full access to bilingual education, health services and credit facilities and can fully participate in decision-making processes.<sup>49</sup> While also noting the adoption of various laws and decrees, including Decree 81-2002, aimed at promoting actions towards the elimination of discrimination on grounds of race and gender among all State ministries, CEDAW expressed its concern about the lack of enforcement, coordination, effective implementation and monitoring of those laws and decrees.<sup>50</sup> UNICEF noted that issues of particular concern in respect of the protection of the rights of indigenous children include child abuse and trafficking, child labour, illegal adoptions as well as a gap in the access to education and health services.<sup>51</sup> The Special Rapporteur on the situation of indigenous people recommended that Guatemala, inter alia, strengthen the educational system as a "national priority".<sup>52</sup>

2. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

9. The Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, in a press statement of 25 March 2008, expressed concern that Decree 06-2008, the "Law regulating the commuting of sentence for those condemned to death", violates international human rights law and called upon the Congress not to override the Presidential veto of this decree and to commit itself instead to a law governing the right to clemency which meets the criteria spelled out by international law.<sup>53</sup>

10. As reported by the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances in 2007, the problem of the thousands of unresolved cases of enforced disappearances remains one of the most serious issues in the country. According to the assessment of the Commission for Historic Clarification, among the 200,000 persons killed during the internal armed conflict, approximately 45,000 were forcibly disappeared.<sup>54</sup> The High Commissioner stated that the adoption into law of the bill establishing the National Commission to Search for Victims of Enforced and Other Forms of Disappearance would be a significant step towards ensuring the right to truth.<sup>55</sup>

11. The Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary and arbitrary executions reported, inter alia, that a number of violent phenomena afflict Guatemala, including social cleansing, the rapidly rising killing of women, lynching, the killing of persons for their sexual identity or orientation and the killing of human rights defenders and prison violence.<sup>56</sup>

12. In 2006, the High Commissioner reported that the OHCHR office in Guatemala had received information on the direct involvement of State security officers in extrajudicial executions and had also noted that Guatemala has incurred indirect responsibility through the acquiescence of a number of its officers.<sup>57</sup> The High Commissioner stated that the direct participation of members of the police force in the extrajudicial execution of three Salvadorian members of the Central American Parliament and their driver, and the subsequent deaths of the alleged perpetrators of those killings during their detention at the high security El Boquerón prison, brought to the public eye the fact that organized structures are operating within various State institutions and committing serious human rights violations. These structures have been utilized by organized crime, drug traffickers and other powerful groups. Furthermore, the cases demonstrate that these structures carry out their activities with the help, acquiescence or tolerance of high-ranking officials in the Ministry of Interior and the National Civilian Police (PNC).<sup>58</sup>

13. The High Commissioner further indicated that “social cleansing” was being practised, sometimes under the direct or indirect responsibility of State officials. The OHCHR office in Guatemala noted the existence of organized groups carrying out such acts, often with the support of the local authorities and help from private security agencies.<sup>59</sup> In 2006, the High Commissioner also stated that the upsurge in mob lynching in the interior of the country was particularly alarming.<sup>60</sup> CAT in 2006 also raised concerns about allegations of, inter alia, “social cleansing” and the killings of children as well as the “lynching of individuals”.<sup>61</sup>

14. According to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders, the number and intensity of attacks against human rights defenders has increased and basically doubled in the last five years, with an average of one attack against defenders every other day. Fifty defenders were killed between July 2002 and December 2007, and 23 killings took place in the last two years.<sup>62</sup> The High Commissioner in her 2006 and 2007 reports also stated that there were numerous attacks and threats against political leaders at all levels. From January to November 2007, the Office of the Human Rights Procurator (PDH) registered 64 attacks against members of political parties, resulting in 26 violent deaths.<sup>63</sup> UNICEF quoted information from the 2006 report of the NHRI, according to which there were 461 homicides of girls, boys and adolescents in Guatemala, the highest number in Latin America.<sup>64</sup> CEDAW was deeply concerned about the continuing and increasing cases of disappearance, rape, torture and murder of women.<sup>65</sup> Similar concerns were expressed by CAT<sup>66</sup> and the High Commissioner, who noted that the most extreme form of violence against women is femicide.<sup>67</sup> The High Commissioner stated that there have also been cases of State officials sexually abusing women in detention or under their authority.<sup>68</sup> CAT recommended that all arrested women be brought immediately before a judge, and, if so ordered, then transferred to a detention centre for women.<sup>69</sup>

15. The High Commissioner also reported that domestic violence continued to be one of the most serious problems faced by women and that, in 2007, the judiciary registered 29,138 complaints of domestic violence.<sup>70</sup> CEDAW urged Guatemala, inter alia, to enact the pending reforms to the Criminal Code to criminalize domestic violence and to allocate the necessary resources to implement the Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Domestic Violence and Violence against Women 2004-2014.<sup>71</sup>

16. CEDAW urged Guatemala to increase efforts to determine the causes and extent of trafficking of women and girls from its perspective as a country of origin, transit and destination and the incidence of internal trafficking.<sup>72</sup> In 2001 the HR Committee was concerned about the information received on the traffic in children separated from their parents.<sup>73</sup> In 2007, UNICEF stated that it is well known that the high demand for children for adoption by foreign families has given rise to an adoption related business and to situations such as kidnapping and trafficking in boys and girls.<sup>74</sup> In 2007, CRC noted with great concern the high numbers of children affected by commercial sexual exploitation, estimated by Guatemala at 15,000 victims.<sup>75</sup> CRC recommended that Guatemala take all necessary measures to ensure child victims and witnesses of any of the crimes under the CRC-OP-SC are protected at all stages of the criminal justice process.<sup>76</sup>

3. Administration of justice and the rule of law

17. The High Commissioner reported that overcoming obstacles to the investigation and punishment of suspected perpetrators of serious human rights violations committed during the internal armed conflict remains a challenge. She stated that in the decision on Spain's request for the arrest of a number of persons with a view to their extradition, the Constitutional Court missed a major opportunity to highlight the State's obligation to investigate, try and punish perpetrators of serious violations committed more than 25 years ago, as well as to adopt prompt measures for guaranteeing the right to justice and respond to the legitimate interest of Spain and the international community in ensuring that those crimes do not go unpunished.<sup>77</sup> CAT and the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, among others, were also concerned about the impunity that persists regarding most of the human rights violations committed during the internal armed conflict.<sup>78</sup>

18. According to the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, Guatemala has a single-digit conviction rate for murder.<sup>79</sup> To understand the causes of this low conviction rate for murder, he referred to the need for a far larger police force, an enlargement that would be accompanied by thoroughgoing reform of existing arrangements.<sup>80</sup> He acknowledged that the challenges of investigations and prosecution confront three key obstacles: a problematic division of responsibility, severely limited resources and endemic corruption.<sup>81</sup> The High Commissioner also stated that the systematic lack of criminal investigation and prosecution procedures contrasts with the high crime rate, and is a measure of the State's failure to comply with its duty to guarantee rights.<sup>82</sup> She noted that the efforts of the Public Prosecutor's Office have been insufficient and incommensurate with the magnitude of the problem of impunity and that this was evident in problems such as the low level of identification of suspected perpetrators, inadequate examination and handling of evidence and of crime scenes, and serious failings in ensuring the chain of custody and in concluding initial investigations.<sup>83</sup> The High Commissioner further stated that the lack of comprehensive public policies for strengthening the PNC and the failure to develop a career structure left a gap in the upper ranks of the police force, which on occasion was filled by elements linked to organized crime, significantly affecting the State's governability. To tackle these challenges, the PNC will need to undergo a thorough restructuring process. This restructuring will have to take into account aspects relating to organizational matters, personnel, deployment, police career structure and ethics, training and incentives, the consolidation of mechanisms for accountability, monitoring and clean-up, and the restructuring and reorienting of the criminal investigation bodies.<sup>84</sup> CAT also recommended, inter alia, that Guatemala repeal all laws which allow the army to be involved in activities of law enforcement or the prevention of ordinary crime, which should be carried out exclusively by the PNC.<sup>85</sup>

19. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General on human rights defenders stated that the reported figure of 98 per cent of impunity for attacks against human rights defenders makes justice an empty word in Guatemala.<sup>86</sup> She stated that despite the establishment of specialized units within the Attorney-General's office to facilitate the investigation of attacks against defenders and the increase in the resources made available to carry out investigations, the inaction of the prosecutors in investigating cases reported by or concerning defenders is disappointing.<sup>87</sup> CEDAW is also deeply concerned about the engrained culture of impunity for crimes against women and urged Guatemala to take without delay all measures necessary to put an end to the murders and disappearances of women and the impunity of perpetrators.<sup>88</sup>

20. According to the Special Rapporteur on the right to food, a serious obstacle to the right to food was the persistent impunity for violations of human rights, and the lack of equality before the law for Guatemala's people. For example, while the non-payment of salaries to workers is classified as a minor misdemeanour, social protest and land occupation are considered a crime and the full force of the law is brought down on peasants and indigenous populations.<sup>89</sup> The Special Rapporteur on the situation of indigenous peoples further noted that the justice system needs support to ensure that victims of human rights violations, and particularly indigenous women, find redress, and indigenous customary law needs to be recognized and incorporated in the work of the judiciary.<sup>90</sup>

21. The High Commissioner noted that an agreement was signed in December 2006 between the Government and the United Nations to create the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala (CICIG).<sup>91</sup> In 2007, UNICEF noted that the CICIG will meet a special challenge in dismantling parallel crime structures operating in the country and quoted International Alert and United Nations estimates that there were at least 1.5 million illegal weapons in Guatemala.<sup>92</sup>

4. Freedom of expression and right to participate in public and political life

22. In 2001, the HR Committee expressed concern that the laws in force on defamation may be used to restrict criticism of the Government or public officials and recommended legislative reform to ensure a proper balance between the protection of a person's reputation and freedom of expression.<sup>93</sup> CERD was also greatly concerned by attitudes of contempt and rejection displayed by the communication media towards indigenous peoples. It recommended, inter alia, that a multicultural approach be adopted in the local community and free communication media and that Guatemala ensure in particular the proper functioning of community radio stations so that they reach the largest possible number of indigenous communities.<sup>94</sup>

23. While noting the efforts to amend the Act on Elections and Political Parties to impose a quota of 44 per cent for women's participation, CEDAW remained concerned about the underrepresentation of women, in particular indigenous women, in political and public positions at all levels.<sup>95</sup> CERD also noted with concern the low level of participation, especially of indigenous women, in political life, the lack of representation in Congress of the Xinca and Garifuna peoples and the absence of a specific reference to indigenous political participation in the Elections and Political Parties Act.<sup>96</sup>

5. Right to work and to just and favourable conditions of work

24. CEDAW expressed concern, inter alia, about the violations of women's labour rights in the maquiladora industries, and about the excessive hours of work and discriminatory practices against pregnant women and the absence of measures to protect the rights of domestic workers. The Committee urged Guatemala to put in place effective measures to prevent and punish violations of the rights of women working in the maquiladora industries, to address the lack of safety and health standards in those industries and to enhance women workers' access to justice. It further urged it to establish a concrete timetable for the adoption of measures to protect the rights of domestic workers.<sup>97</sup> CESCR also urged Guatemala to take all necessary measures to address the persistent problem of child labour, especially in agriculture and domestic services.<sup>98</sup>

25. CESCR was concerned about the high level of unemployment, in particular among indigenous peoples, and that the minimum wage is not sufficient to provide a decent living for workers and their families and is not always paid. It urged Guatemala to increase its efforts to combat unemployment and recommended, inter alia, that the minimum wage is increased regularly in proportion to the cost of living and that the rules regarding minimum wage are respected in practice.<sup>99</sup>

6. Right to social security and to an adequate standard of living

26. In 2007, the High Commissioner reported that Guatemala is among the countries with the highest levels of inequality in Latin America, it has the second lowest Human Development Index in the region, and that inequality and poverty continues to be the main challenge Guatemala faces in progressing towards the realization of economic, social and cultural rights. CESCR was also deeply concerned about the uneven distribution of wealth and land and the high level of social exclusion, in particular among indigenous and rural populations.<sup>100</sup> UNICEF noted that nearly half of all children suffer from chronic malnutrition, which is one of the worst records worldwide, and there are even more alarming figures within the indigenous population.<sup>101</sup> It also noted that social and economic exclusion affects a large proportion of the national population; 51 per cent live in poverty and 15.7 per cent of these live in extreme poverty. The situation is dramatically worse among children in rural areas and among indigenous children and adolescents (76 and 80 per cent, respectively, live in poverty).<sup>102</sup> CEDAW noted that the poverty conditions of women are reflected in their high illiteracy rates, low school enrolment and completion rates, poor access to health care, including sexual and reproductive health, leading to high rates of maternal mortality, and lack of access to land and training opportunities. It was also concerned about the absence of a comprehensive strategy for rural development that addresses the structural nature of the problems rural women continue to face.<sup>103</sup> In 2007, the High Commissioner urged the Congress and the Government to formulate a social policy based on a human rights and gender perspective, which should include reorienting the national general budget and adopting sustained policies for combating poverty and reducing inequality. She also reiterated the need to raise taxes and review the tax collection and exemption system.<sup>104</sup>

7. Right to education and to participate in the cultural life of the community

27. CERD was concerned by the high illiteracy rate that exists within the indigenous population, especially in rural areas, where 65 per cent of indigenous women are illiterate. It was also concerned at the low primary school attendance among the indigenous population, especially indigenous young women and girls. It urged Guatemala to take steps in the short and medium terms to implement measures to reduce illiteracy, especially in rural areas and among women and girls. It also recommended that Guatemala consider increasing the number of bilingual schools, particularly in rural areas and that it pursue educational reform through culturally relevant curricula, bearing in mind the provisions of the Agreement on Identity and Rights of Indigenous Peoples.<sup>105</sup>

8. Minorities and indigenous peoples

28. In 2006, CERD expressed concern, as highlighted also by UNHCR,<sup>106</sup> about indigenous peoples' lack of access to land, the lack of respect shown for their traditional lands, such as community forests, and the problems in relation to the restitution of lands to indigenous peoples displaced as a result of armed conflict or economic development plans.<sup>107</sup> In 2005, the Special Rapporteur on violence against women also referred to the problems of unequal land distribution and that the registration of landholdings continues to pose an obstacle to land rights. She stated that an estimated 2 per cent of Guatemalans own 70-75 per cent of all productive land and that the Agreement on the Identity and Rights of Indigenous Peoples component of the Peace Accords has not adequately addressed expropriation-based land reform.<sup>108</sup> In 2006, two special procedure mandate holders sent a joint communication to the Government regarding the eviction of 400 indigenous peasants from the José de la Moca coffee plantation, in the city of Senahu. According to the information received, as a consequence of the eviction, the peasants lost their only source of income and had no place to stay but beside a highway, where they only had access to contaminated water.<sup>109</sup> The Government has not replied to this communication. CAT was also concerned about reports of the use of excessive force by police officers during evictions in rural areas, which often result, inter alia, in the destruction of homes, and sometimes even in violent deaths.<sup>110</sup>

29. CERD was also concerned by reports of obstructions to the use of traditional sacred sites by indigenous peoples and conflicts arising from these tensions being handled by judicial officers as criminal matters.<sup>111</sup> Moreover, it noted with concern that mining licences have been granted by the Ministry of Energy and Mines to concession enterprises and regretted that indigenous peoples were not consulted or informed that the permission to exploit the subsoil of their territory had been awarded to such enterprises.<sup>112</sup> The High Commissioner reported that while the energy and mining policy adopted in October 2007 envisages consultation processes for the mining sector, comprehensive regulation is still needed through a law on consultation, in line with ILO Convention No. 169 concerning Indigenous and Tribal Peoples in Independent Countries.<sup>113</sup>

III. ACHIEVEMENTS, BEST PRACTICES, CHALLENGES AND CONSTRAINTS

30. The High Commissioner stated that the end of authoritarian, repressive and violent State practices associated with the internal armed conflict have brought undeniable benefits to the country as a whole, but especially to those areas in the countryside that bore the brunt of the conflict.<sup>114</sup> CAT also welcomed, inter alia, the fact that the practice of enforced disappearance as a State policy has ceased<sup>115</sup> and the High Commissioner noted that the President's public recognition of the atrocities committed during the armed conflict and of the existence of racial discrimination in the country, constituted important steps forward.<sup>116</sup>

31. The High Commissioner also reported, inter alia, that violence and insecurity fuelled by such underlying factors as unemployment, social exclusion and non-enforcement of the law pose a major challenge to Guatemala, which committed itself to the professional development of the public security forces under the authority of the civil administration.<sup>117</sup> Additionally, the High Commissioner reported that it was crucial to address the root causes of all forms of social violence, including the activities of criminal gangs.<sup>118</sup>

IV. KEY NATIONAL PRIORITIES, INITIATIVES AND COMMITMENTS

A. Pledges by the State

32. In 2006, Guatemala committed, inter alia, to continuing to support and strengthen its national human rights institutions and to create new ones if the need arises. Guatemala is fully committed to supporting the advancement of the rights of indigenous peoples.<sup>119</sup>

B. Specific recommendations for follow-up

33. In 2001, the HR Committee requested Guatemala to provide information on any action it had taken in relation to the Committee's recommendations on disappearances and extrajudicial executions and on pretrial detention.<sup>120</sup> In July 2003 Guatemala provided a response and, inter alia, admitted that there have been reports of disappearances, the modus operandi of which suggest the work of gangs involved in drug smuggling and common crime and that the competent authorities have launched investigations.<sup>121</sup> In 2006, CAT requested Guatemala to provide information on its response to recommendations related to: the increase in acts of harassment and persecution experienced by human rights defenders; impunity regarding the human rights violations committed during the internal armed conflict; the numerous allegations concerning: "social cleansing" and killings of children living in the street; violent killings of women; lynching of individuals; and sexual violence against women in police stations.<sup>122</sup> The follow-up report to CAT, due in May 2007, has not yet been received.<sup>123</sup> CERD requested Guatemala to submit a follow-up report on the implementation of its recommendations contained in paragraphs 13, 15 and 19 of its concluding observations.<sup>124</sup> The follow-up report was submitted and is scheduled to be considered in August 2008. It provides information on: classification of racial discrimination as an offence; access to justice by indigenous women; and the right of indigenous peoples to be consulted.<sup>125</sup>

34. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders, after her most recent visit, made preliminary recommendations to the Government, including: giving recognition and legitimacy to the work of human rights defenders; adopting a governmental policy for their protection; ensuring coordination among institutions responsible for the investigations of cases, particularly between the police and the Attorney-General's office; and ensuring the full collaboration of relevant institutions, in the implementation of the recommendations and findings of the Ombudsperson and the CICIG.<sup>126</sup>

V. CAPACITY-BUILDING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

35. UNICEF and FAO provided information of their programmes and capacity-building efforts in Guatemala.<sup>127</sup>
