I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. During the opening statement, the delegation of Solomon Islands noted that human rights is a fundamental principle entrenched in the Constitution, and acknowledged the assistance of other governments, development partners and the civil society for progress made in promoting and protecting human rights in the Solomon Islands.
6. A priority focus is peace and reconciliation since the country is still in a peace building and reconstruction phase after a five-year period of social unrest which the nation experienced between 1998 and 2003. Although a lot of emphasis is being placed on structural, legislative, social and economic reforms, the losses incurred from the unrest are still affecting the enjoyment and realization of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights by its citizens.
7. The Solomon Islands is also not immune to the effects of global warming and climate change which give rise to environmental degradation, resource depletion, food insecurity, social and economic conflicts and growing poverty.
8. The Solomon Islands participates in the Universal Periodic Review with an open mind, sharing information on progress made in advancing human rights and committed to learning and benefitting from the interactive dialogue. The delegation thanked development partners for their support in preparation for the universal periodic review, in particular the Regional Office for the Pacific of the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat, the Pacific Regional Rights Resource Team of the Secretariat of the Pacific Community (sponsored by the Government of the Netherlands), and the Commonwealth Secretariat.

9. Of a most pressing nature is the need to ratify the Optional Protocols to CRC which the Solomon Islands has already signed, and which is a priority task in the government's work plan for 2011.

10. The delegation reported on its commitment and current efforts to submit its periodic reports to CEDAW and CRC and acknowledged that reports to the Committees for the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Elimination All Forms of Racial Discrimination are due. The government plans to set up a treaties committee to monitor its reporting obligations.

11. Although the Solomon Islands is yet to fully implement the concluding observations from the CRC of 2003, they have incorporated these observations into the National Children's Policy.

12. As part of Pacific regional commitments, the Solomon Islands has committed to the 2009 Pacific Islands Forum Leaders Cairns Compact which recognizes violence against women as pervasive and underreported. The Compact also recognizes that sexual and gender based violence is a human security issue and is a destabilizing factor for communities and societies. A Sexual and Gender Based Violence Reference Group to support national efforts has consequently been developed.

13. The Solomon Islands is committed to the Pacific Plan, especially Strategic Objective 12.5 which outlines the region's commitment to human rights through "treaty ratification, reporting and implementation" and the Pacific Disability Framework Strategy. It is also committed to the principles of the Millennium Development Goals, The World Fit for Children Affirmation.

14. The bill of rights is entrenched in Chapter II of the 1978 Constitution. A draft Federal Constitution has an expanded bill of rights which includes civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights. It also provides for a national human rights commission.

15. The Solomon Islands has passed legislation, endorsed policies and set out action plans and guidelines to direct the implementation of human rights. Reference was made in particular to the Evidence Act 2009, which eliminated the corroboration warning in sexual violence convictions and the use of prior sexual conduct of complainants as evidence to question the character and credibility of complainants. In 2009 the government endorsed the Family Health and Safety Study which showed a very high prevalence of domestic violence, as well as a baseline report for creating a future free from violence, abuse and exploitation of girls and boys. It has also recognized the recommendations from a report on the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the presence of the logging industry.

16. In 2010, the government endorsed the National Gender Equality and Women in Development Policy which provides overarching objectives for gender equality and women's development, as well as The National Eliminating Violence against Women Policy. The delegation reported on policies for the implementation of CRC, such as The National Children's Policy (for ages 0–18) and The National Youth policy (for ages 14–29).

17. Human rights is one of the guiding principles of the National Coalition for Reform and Advancement Government Policy for the next four years. The policy sets out to promote social and economic advancements that ensure fair distribution and equal access and opportunities for all. It specifically aims to promote gender equality and full participation of women.

18. The delegation also referred to institutions set up to promote human rights, such as the Office of the Auditor General, the Office of the Ombudsman and a Leadership Code Commission and commended the Regional Assistance Mission to Solomon Islands for its role in strengthening the capacity of these institutions. A Truth and Reconciliation Commission was also established in 2009 with a mandate to promote national unity and reconciliation.
19. Solomon Islands thanked delegations for their advanced questions and provided responses highlighting some challenges.
20. The delegation reported on the approval of a national policy which sets out strategic actions and cross cutting efforts to prevent violence against women, protect victims and to prosecute perpetrators. The policy also recognizes the need for significant social, political and economic empowerment of women. Progress has also been made to propose legislation for trafficking, protection orders for victims of violence in the home, law reform to respond to child abuse, neglect and exploitation.
21. Regarding the promotion of women's participation in decision making, the delegation referred to the Gender Equality and Women's Development Policy. Some significant steps have been taken to promote and increase women's participation in politics, decision making and leadership. Regarding women, peace and security, there is currently a move to develop a national action plan.
22. On the issue of land ownership, the delegation indicated that this was one of the root causes of the civil unrest from 1998 to 2003. The Government initiated the Constitutional Reform Program in 2000 as an initiative to address this issue. Work on the constitutional reform is well advanced with provincial feedback on the 2009 draft federal constitution now in progress. Government further developed a land reform policy and established the land reform unit, which is working in consultation with land owning groups to determine tribal boundaries and map the relevant map areas concerned. A Commission of Inquiry into land dealings and lost properties on Guadalcanal in 2007 was also set up and is now conducting its hearing on abandoned lands. These initiatives will take time to materialize but they are in progress.
23. Regarding progress made by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission especially in terms of what it has done to create the social conditions needed to establish peace in the longer term, the delegation reported that Commissioners were appointed in 2009 and operations began in 2010. Significant progress has been made through national and provincial public hearings as well as closed hearings for victims of the tensions.
24. The delegation noted that climate change is a big problem. A Ministry for Conservation, Environment, Climate Change and Disaster Reduction has been established and a National Environment Policy to accommodate both the sector and cross-sector policies for development is being implemented.
25. On the establishment of a national human rights institution, this is dependant on the draft Federal Constitution being passed. Solomon Islands is however open to explore the possibility of having a national human rights institution established which is not necessary hinged on the draft federal constitution being passed.
26. The delegation reported that the cultural context of the society does not condone relationships between same sexes. Any commitment to removing Penal Code provisions criminalizing sexual relations between consenting adults of the same sex must be subject to consultations. However, there have not been any submissions to the Law Reform Commission in their review of the Penal Code to repeal these sections.
27. In concluding, the Solomon Islands noted that it has frameworks and institutions that work to integrate human rights, however, it are also dealing with a range of competing priorities and limited resources. It called on the international community to assist them to explore how they can strategize to ensure that the citizens of Solomon Islands continue to enjoy full realization of their rights. The delegation recognized the initiatives of the Pacific Regional Rights Resource Team of the Secretariat of the Pacific Community for a Regional Human Rights Commission that will reinforce national initiatives to promote and protect human rights.

28. The Solomon Islands announced that it is extending an open invitation to all mandate holders of the United Nations special procedures to visit the country.

29. The Solomon Islands informed that a coordinating committee will be established to monitor implementation, monitoring and reporting following this Universal Periodic Review.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

30. During the interactive dialogue, 28 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

31. Canada welcomed the adoption of policies and plans to address several human rights issues as well as the announcement of the extension of an open invitation to the special procedures. It was concerned by the lack of law enforcement, ongoing corruption and the continuing widespread discrimination against women and girls, children of certain ethnic minorities, and children with disabilities, endemic practices of domestic violence and ill-treatment and abuse of children, including child labour, exploitation and prostitution. Canada made recommendations.

32. Cuba stated that the Solomon Islands faced enormous challenges originating in the global economic crisis and serious environmental problems, as well as other consequences of the unjust international economic order. Additionally, it noted that the country had been faced with an ethnic conflict and that great efforts had been required to restore normality. Cuba considered that, nevertheless, the country had deployed significant efforts to minimize the negative impact of these circumstances noting, in particular, measures to ensure education and improve services for the population. It also took note of the National Health Plan 2010-2015 and collaboration between the two countries to help improve health services and train health professionals. Cuba made recommendations.

33. Algeria commended the Solomon Islands for having been always a supporter of human rights initiatives at the regional level and for governmental efforts in the areas of health, youth and education. It expressed the conviction that further progress would be achieved within the framework of the implementation of the National Development Strategy 2011-2015. It was aware of the constraints faced by a Small Island Developing State in the context of the negative impact of climate change and the economic crisis, and recalled that international cooperation was important. Algeria made a recommendation.

34. Ireland welcomed efforts by the Solomon Islands to strengthen human rights including the Policy Strategic Framework 2008-2010 and the establishment of the first Truth and Reconciliation Commission in the Pacific. It also welcomed the commitment made during the review to issue a standing invitation to the Special Procedures and the initiative to consider establishing a National Human Rights Institution. It inquired what initiatives are planned and what may be done by the country to tackle climate change. Ireland also asked what progress has been achieved in developing multi-year plans to guide capacity building for the judiciary and police. Ireland made recommendations.

35. Australia congratulated the Solomon Islands for the conduct of its national election in 2010 and restated its support for future reform. It was pleased with the announcement of the extension of a standing invitation to the special procedures, recognized the progress achieved in the Islands toward strengthening its justice system and noted the importance of consolidating these gains as the Regional Assistance Mission was to draw down. It noted that gender-based violence remained a significant problem. It welcomed the continuing commitment to pursue justice for victims of the ‘tensions’ through the extension of the mandate of the Truth Commission until 2012. It made recommendations.

36. Norway expressed concern that adolescents do not have adequate information on and access to health and, in particular, reproductive health. It was also concerned about reports that girls are traded as brides in exchange for payments. It noted that the country still maintains criminal sanctions against sexual activity between consenting adults of the same sex. Norway appreciated efforts made to end violence against women and reduce illiteracy. It made recommendations.

37. Hungary commended the Solomon Islands for the establishment of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and recognized steps made towards gender equality, in particular changes to the legal practices criminalizing sexual assault. However, it was concerned with the increasing number of cases of gender discrimination and violence against women and highlighted the lack of judicial redress, which perpetuated gender inequality. It noted achievements in ensuring the wellbeing of children but considered that child protection could be further improved through the prohibition of corporal punishment, ill treatment or violence at home, at schools and all other contexts. Hungary made recommendations.

38. Brazil appreciated progress made in the country despite constraints posed by poverty, unemployment and climate change. It was encouraged by the possibility that the Solomon Islands will attain the Millennium Development Goals on universal primary education. It also welcomed recent legislative measures to provide protection to refugees. Brazil noted, however, reports indicating that domestic and sexual violence against women and children remain major problems. It also noted with concern the low ages for criminal responsibility and employment. Brazil made recommendations.

39. France noted with satisfaction that the Truth and Reconciliation Commission had begun its work in 2010. It also highlighted that primary education, though free, is still not compulsory, that the number of girls attending schools is low and that qualified teachers are rare. It noted the concerns by the Committee on the Rights of the Child regarding the low minimum age of criminal responsibility. It also expressed concern regarding the number of cases domestic violence and the fact the Criminal Code criminalizes consensual sexual.

40. Thailand noted Solomon Islands’ efforts to promote and protect human rights despite many existing challenges. It welcomed the announcement of the extension of a standing invitation to the Special Procedures. It acknowledged steps taken to strengthen its domestic human rights institutions such the amendment of the Evidence Act in 2009. Nevertheless, it shared concerns with some international organizations regarding discriminatory practices and laws against women and girls. It also noted discrimination of other vulnerable groups. Thailand stated that it stood ready to continue cooperating with the Solomon Islands in the area of capacity building of human resources in the public sector. It made recommendations.

41. In responding to additional questions and comments, the delegation thanked speakers that had taken the floor for their comments, advice and recommendations. It noted that some issues had already been addressed in the opening statement and responses to advanced questions received.

42. The delegation took note of recommendations to ratify human rights instruments which the Solomon Islands has not yet signed/ratified and reassured countries that Solomon Islands would take the necessary steps to do so.

43. In relation to Canada's question, Solomon Islands acknowledged that the current offences in the penal code procuring defilement of a woman by threats, household permitting defilement of a girl under 15 years, detentions in a brothel and obtaining and disposing of minors for immoral purposes, only apply to girls and women and some offences are limited to acts of sexual intercourse.

44. The delegation acknowledged that laws do not criminalize the full range of activities associated with child prostitution. Penalties are now low and there is no protection for children from being liable to prosecutions for prostitution. Standards from the Optional Protocol to the CRC on the sale of children, prostitution and child pornography are being used to develop recommendations for reforms in this area, even though the Solomon Islands has only signed this protocol. The Law Reform Commission is also considering introduction of an offence regarding the sale of children for sexual exploitation.

45. On a question raised by Cuba, progress is still to be made for the women, children and persons with disabilities. It is all part of the current Eliminating Violence against Women policy, the Youth and Children's policy and the Disability policy where reform is needed.

46. The Constitution does not contain a guarantee of access to health care. However, the draft federal constitution does include a section on health care in article 47. The delegation took the opportunity to thank the Cuban government for the number of students studying medicine in Cuba. Cuba has also sent medical officers and doctors who are working in the Solomon Islands to assist in alleviating or eliminating some of the health problems.

47. The Solomon Islands has a corporate plan on health care which is based on the following qualifications: improvement of access to quality care, management and development of human resources, maternity and morbidity reduction, maintenance of health environment, promotion of healthy living and life style and improvement of reproductive health and family planning.

48. In response to a question made by Algeria, the delegation noted that it will work to ratify human rights treaties to strengthen its framework and institutions.

49. In response to a question made by Ireland, the delegation stated that the Law Reform Commission does not have specific reference to deal with traditional justice, but the Ministry of Justice and the World Bank are currently working together on a project called 'Justice for the Poor' to address this issue.

50. The delegation reported that access to justice is a priority for the Solomon Islands and that it will continue to reform laws and policies. The delegation took the opportunity to thank Australia for the assistance provided in institution strengthening and capacity building in the law sector.

51. The Solomon Islands further stated that it had recently sent an invitation to the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights Regional Office for an in-country assessment for the purpose of establishing an Office in Solomon Islands.

52. The delegation noted the commitment of the government to ensure legal mechanisms are in place and conducive to the rights of women and children.

53. On the issue of corporal punishment of children, the delegation stated that the penal code contains an offense of cruelty towards children, section 2.33. However, that section does not affect the right of any parent or any other person having the control of a child to administer reasonable punishment to a child. 'Reasonable' must be consistent with the constitutional right to be free from torture and it is usually determined by the court on a case-by-case basis. The review of the penal code is considering whether any further provision or guidance should be given in the law about when corporal punishment is lawful.

54. On issues surrounding sexual relationships between consenting adults of the same sex, as raised by Brazil, the delegation indicated this is being dealt under the review of the penal code.

55. The United States of America commended the Solomon Islands on holding of national elections in 2010 and efforts made, with the assistance of the Regional Assistance Mission to the Solomon Islands (RAMSI), to address police corruption and impunity, and reduce the backlog of cases before the courts. It expressed concern regarding human rights problems, including, lengthy pre-trial detention, government corruption, and violence and discrimination against women. It noted male dominance in government and that violence against women remain a serious problem. Additionally, it noted that children and foreign women are often subjected to forced prostitution and that local children are victims of domestic servitude. It encouraged the country to investigate and prosecute human trafficking. It made recommendations.

56. Slovenia acknowledged the fragile economic and political situation of the Solomon Islands resulting from civil unrest in the near past. It commended the National Plan of Action for Human Rights outlined in 2010, in which the establishment of a national human rights institution is considered. It encouraged the Government to address the widespread use of corporal punishment of children. It expressed concern about child prostitution and asked what measures will be taken in this regard. Slovenia was also concerned by the prevalence of domestic physical and sexual violence against women, which is understood in the Islands as a private issue, resulting in impunity. It made recommendations.

57. Germany asked what measures have been undertaken to grant equal access to justice to all. It inquired about measures adopted to educate the population on the rights of women and equal rights of women and men. Germany also asked about efforts made to follow up recommendations by the CRC to reduce the number of working children and to ensure that children who work do so in accordance with international standards and have access to education. Germany expressed concern that children were exposed to prostitution and noted the absence of institutions for the rehabilitation of victims and the lack of data. It made a recommendation.

58. Chile recognized existing constraints to the enjoyment of human rights created by climate change and measures taken to address these by the Government of the Solomon Islands through the national policy on climate change. Chile reiterated its support to initiatives aimed at addressing this issue. It acknowledged public efforts to promote and protect human rights and the work of the Truth Commission. It noted the National Development Strategy, progress achieved in the area of gender equality and the initiative to consider the establishment of a national human rights institution. It made recommendations.

59. Argentina asked what results have been obtained through the implementation of the National Policy on Eliminating Violence against Women (2010) and the National Policy on Gender Equality and Women's Development. It also inquired about measures adopted to eliminate all forms of discrimination against boys and girls, in particular those belonging to ethnic minorities, those living in remote islands, children born out of wedlock and disabled children. Argentina made recommendations.

60. Maldives acknowledged the consultation process engaged by the Solomon Islands, a fellow member of the Alliance of Small Island States, to prepare its national report for the UPR. It stated that the Working Group should understand the challenges in the promotion and protection of human rights faced by the country because of its smallness and capacity constraints. It recognized the commitment of the Islands' Government to human rights and progress achieved in a range of areas covering civil and political rights, and economic, social and cultural rights. It made recommendations.

61. Mexico recognized efforts made to address the past, in particular the establishment of a Truth and Reconciliation Commission. It expressed appreciation of the recognition by the Government of challenges faced in areas such as youth unemployment, violence within the family, gender equality and access to education, as well as efforts to ratify international human rights conventions. Mexico asked for greater details on what type of international technical cooperation would be needed to prevent and eliminate sexual exploitation and abuse, in particular of women. It made recommendations.

62. Spain welcomed the establishment of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission in 2009. It asked how it reconciled the treatment received by Mr. Lusibaea with the work of the Truth Commission. It also requested information on measures taken by the Government to guarantee gender equality in political life and other domains. It made recommendations.

63. Trinidad and Tobago recognized the many challenges faced by the country and commended the Solomon Islands for the work undertaken to incorporate into domestic law the Rights of People with Disabilities, Child Protection and the Convention on Elimination of all forms of Discrimination against Women. It also congratulated the Government for acknowledging slow progress in areas such as law reform, the rights of women and children, and domestic violence, affirming that this situation was the result of resource capacity constraints rather than a lack of commitment. It made recommendations.

64. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland hoped that the Solomon Islands Government would take the opportunity offered by the UPR to demonstrate that it was genuine in its desire to move on from the tensions and was serious in its attempts to rebuild the country. It recognized the challenges faced by the Islands and welcomed the announcement of the extension of a standing invitation to the Special Procedures. It hoped the Government would seek technical assistance and cultivate the involvement of civil society in the follow up to the review. It asked whether the Government would consider raising the minimum ages regarding child labour and criminal responsibility. It made recommendations.

65. In response to questions raised by countries on the issue of age of criminal responsibility, the delegation noted that the penal code provides that the current minimum age of criminal responsibility is 8 years old. A child under the age of 12 is not criminally responsible for an act or omission unless he or she has the capacity to know that he or she ought not to do an act or an omission. The minimum age of criminal responsibility is currently being considered by the Law Reform Commission, under its reference to review the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedures Code. That is now being taken care of and worked on.

66. Costa Rica acknowledged the social progress achieved by the Solomon Islands in the area of education and health. It considered that to further improve this situation it would be important to grant special attention to girls' access to education. It was concerned by human rights constraints provoked by external factors such as climate change. It recalled, in this regard, resolution HRC 16/11 and invited the Islands to present its contribution and comments to OHCHR. It made recommendations.

67. Morocco noted that the national report indicates progress made in spite of difficulties linked to high unemployment and poverty and climate change. It commended the country for measures adopted to amend the Constitution, strengthen the rule of law and the independence of the judiciary, as well as support civil society. Morocco made recommendations.

68. New Zealand stated that it had been working with the Solomon Islands to achieve its goal of providing basic education for all and eliminating gender disparity in education. It commended the country for impressive progress made in achieving universal basic education and for having allocated high levels of the budget for this purpose. It expressed concern about the situation of women, noting the absence of women in parliament and the violence against women. It noted improvement in prison conditions and commended the country for having signed the Convention on the Rights to Persons with Disabilities. It made recommendations.

69. China took note of efforts by the Solomon Islands to, among others, improve the level of education and health services in the country. It noted with concern that there is widespread discrimination against women across the country and that there is severe poverty and a lack of effective guarantee for economic, social and cultural rights of the people. China expressed the hope that the Solomon Islands will pay attention to economic and social development and that effective measures will be taken to achieve gender equality, poverty elimination and other MDGs. China rejected the reference to “Republic of China” and “Taiwan” in the national report of the Solomon Islands. It emphasized that, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 2758, the Peoples’ Republic of China was the only legitimate representative of the entire country, of which Taiwan was an integral part.

70. Ecuador welcomed the Solomon Islands Government’s efforts to eliminate child malnutrition and maternal mortality as well as progress in the area of universal education. It made recommendations.

71. Indonesia recognized that the Solomon Islands was still confronted by a number of challenges which continued to impede progress on human rights and national development. It noted progress achieved in providing access to universal primary education through the Free Fee Basic Education policy, which permitted the country to bring within reach the attainment of Millennium Development Goal 2. It was concerned by the fact that gender inequality remains an issue but appreciated the frankness of the Government in conceding that more needs to be done to ensure the promotion and protection of the rights of women at all levels. Indonesia made recommendations.

72. Slovakia commended the Solomon Islands for measures adopted with a view to ensuring gender equality in its domestic law and took note with appreciation of the adoption of national policy plans on children and youth as well as the Government’s initiative to consider establishing National Human Rights Institution. It noted concerns regarding child labour, lack of birth registration, and the low minimum age of criminal responsibility. While commending the country for providing free education, Slovakia expressed concern about the high level of children not being enrolled due to infrastructure shortages as well as the fact that education is not compulsory. Slovakia made recommendations.

73. The Philippines commended the Government for having ratified or signed a number of human rights instruments despite the challenges the country faced. It encouraged the international community to increase its assistance and support for the Solomon Islands, especially in the field of poverty eradication and education. It requested information on plans and cooperation projects aimed at improving the quality of education and on specific programs seeking to address the equitable access to education of children with disabilities. It also asked how the delegation wished the HRC to address the human costs of climate change. It made recommendations.

74. On the issue of education, the delegation acknowledged that because of gender disparities, women in the Solomon Islands are generally regarded as having lower status than men. It is also common in the country that females are attending school at lower rate than boys, particularly in middle to higher levels of the education system. The Solomon Islands has set this as a priority to achieve equal access to education in the education work program. The two core objectives of the program are: 100 per cent enrollment and gender balance. The program also acknowledges the accessibility for students with disabilities and it is working towards ensuring that education services are available to all children. The delegation took the opportunity to thank New Zealand for assisting the Solomon Islands in its efforts to provide free education to all children from primary school to the junior secondary school. It also thanked the United Kingdom and the European Union for their support for the schools' infrastructures.

75. On the question raised by the Philippines on climate change, the delegation thanked the United Kingdom and the European Union for the climate change adoption and mitigation funds to assist them in their climate change challenges.

76. With regard to the issue of birth registration, the delegation acknowledged that the UNICEF child protection baseline study carried out in 2008 estimated very low birth registration in the Solomon Islands. The National Children's Policy and Action Plan caters for the promotion of registration of all births to create a protective environment for children. Current developments include the followings: the government is planning to look at legislative reform in 2011 to support an effective birth registration system. In 2010, the government piloted a revision of birth registration procedures in three selected locations. UNICEF is currently supporting the strengthening of the operational capacity of the central civil birth registration office and expanding mobile network coverage. The government, in partnership with UNICEF, is promoting birth registration via mobile phones. Awareness raising campaigns were also carried out.

77. Referring to the issue of ratifications of human rights conventions, the delegation informed that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and External Trade is working on the issue with the Attorney General Chamber. Consultations will start in mid June, to establish a National Treaties Advisory Committee that includes Human Rights Committees and ILO conventions. As a country with a dualist legal system, the delegation noted that the Solomon Islands needs to first work on relevant policies and bills for international conventions domestication. The Solomon Islands cannot just go ahead with ratification without giving it serious consideration and hence endorsement by government through the Cabinet. The government is looking at this in steps in order to address these issues.

78. In concluding, the delegation indicated that the government is working hard to ensure that the issues raised can be rectified as they go along. It thanked all delegations for the questions raised and noted that in spite of the many challenges that the Solomon Islands is facing, it is determined and committed to address these issues in the country. Much has been done but more needs to be done.
