Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its eighteenth session from 27 January to 7 February 2014. The review of Cambodia was held at the 4th meeting on 28 January 2014. The delegation of Cambodia was headed by H.E. Mr Mak Sambath, Vice Chair of the National Human Rights Committee of Cambodia. At its 10th meeting held on 31 January 2014, the Working Group adopted the report on Cambodia.
2. On 15 January 2014, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Cambodia: Italy, Morocco and the Philippines.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Cambodia:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/KHM/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/KHM/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/KHM/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Czech Republic, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, the Netherlands, Slovenia, Sweden, and United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America was transmitted to Cambodia through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of Cambodia highlighted the importance of the UPR mechanism as a national process that gives the opportunity to each State to carry out measures to improve the situation of human rights in its territory.
6. The delegation reminded that Cambodia had taken part in the UPR Working Group in December 2009 and that the 91 recommendations formulated by the delegations at that time were in line with the Government's policy.
7. The delegation explained that after having received the 91 recommendations, the Cambodian authorities appointed a Working Group (WG) chaired by Mr. Mak Sambath and comprised of 21 members coming from relevant ministries and institutions. This WG cooperated with the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to organize two workshops with the participation of experts from OHCHR, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines. It also organized five meetings with relevant ministries and institutions and two consultations with civil society organisations. In October 2013, the Council of Ministers under the auspice of the Prime Minister adopted the report.
8. The delegation noted the positive achievements, challenges and future goals in seven major areas: ratifications; land rights; rule of law; detention and issues related to torture and ill-treatment; economic, social and cultural rights; women's rights and children's rights.

9. The delegation underlined that Cambodia ratified nine international conventions. Regarding the two Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on the Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on the Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Cambodian Human Rights Committee (CHRC), with the assistance of OHCHR, organized two seminars and meetings with relevant ministries and institutions. For the time being, the CHRC and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs are consulting with the relevant actors and will submit it to the Government for approval.

10. Regarding invitations to the special procedures mandate holders, the delegation stated that there was no need to be invited, since they can visit Cambodia at any time. It signalled that currently there were many organizations working on human rights issues in the country such as the Human Rights and Complaints Commission of the National Assembly; the Human Rights and Complaints Commission of the Senate; the CHRC; hundreds of national and international organizations including OHCHR as well as the Special Rapporteur for the situation of human rights.

11. In regards to the land issues, the delegation noted that the Cambodian authorities continue to register all types of land aiming at strengthening the safety of land ownership. The campaign in the implementation of “Old Policy, New Actions” on land sector had been launched to carry out the measurement programme for distribution of land and residential and rice field titles had been issued. Up to date, the authorities have registered 2,845,282 land titles for 500,000 families. Regarding the land evictions, the delegation stated that certain people were not well informed and that the Government had to take into consideration the interest and the safety of the people and cannot leave the interest of the majority being the hostage of the minority.

12. The delegation mentioned that the Government recognized the illegal land ownership, on a temporary basis, for people looking for a legal location to reside. It added that representatives have been designated to protect the interests of the poor communities. The delegation also explained that in general, a notification on a location shift or development is sent at least one year in advance.

13. Regarding lands of indigenous peoples, the delegation highlighted that the Government has policies, regulations and laws to protect and recognize their rights. A sub-decree has been drafted based on pilot projects of land registration for three indigenous communities. Furthermore, consultations were carried out with national and international law experts, relevant ministries and institutions, development partners, civil society organisations and, especially, with the indigenous people themselves.

14. On the rule of law, the delegation stated that the Government continues to carry out deep reforms on legal and judiciary issues. Up to date, 416 laws have been adopted to enhance the legal framework and to strengthen the capacity, independence, and impartiality of judiciary institutions. The authorities will continue to work harder to reform the laws by encouraging the draft of new laws; increasing laws awareness programs and conducting training for the laws enforcement officials at all levels. The delegation added that the Government had also pushed to enact the laws related to the judiciary.

15. Mentioning that the election of the National Assembly took place on 28 July 2013, the delegation stated that all political parties had access to the media. The National Election Committee (NEC) facilitated the use of freedom of expression and public assembly for all. It also encouraged the national and international organisations to get involved in the dissemination of information related to the elections. The delegation noted that the electoral campaign, the vote and the vote counting were conducted smoothly and that almost all the national and international observers assessed the electoral process positively.

16. The delegation signalled that, after having received recommendations from various sources, such as the Special Rapporteur for human rights in Cambodia, the Government gave the task to the Ministry of Interior to organize in the first semester of 2014, a national workshop with the representatives of the Legislative and Executive, registered political parties, NEC, civil society and international organizations, development partners and other relevant stakeholders. The aim of this workshop is to collect opinions, comments and recommendations in order to draft electoral reforms.

17. The delegation stated that the authorities underlined the important role of the civil society organisations as an effective partner of the Government. In this view, it encourages the associations and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and welcomes their participation in the socio-economic development and the promotion of democracy and human rights.

18. Regarding the right to association, the delegation mentioned the draft Law on Associations and NGOs aimed at providing standards and conditions of registration which will facilitate the activities of the associations and the local and international NGOs in Cambodia. After several discussions with associations, national and international organisations, representatives of States, the draft law was submitted to the Council of Ministers which approved it unanimously.

19. In respect with freedom of expression, the delegation noted that under the Article 41 of the Constitution, any individual can express its opinion and has the right to freedom of expression. The delegation underlined that the Government had encouraged public fora and permitted the civil society organisations to express their opinions freely. As a matter of fact, there are NGOs such as the Cambodian Human Rights Centre, ADHOC, LICADHO, NDI and IRI that disseminate and give training on human rights throughout the country.

20. The delegation explained that there are in Cambodia, 721 publishing media, 139 radio stations, 108 TV stations, 127 cable TVs and over-counted of social media networks which disseminate information without censorship. Citizens have the right to create their own website and disseminate their opinions freely.

21. Regarding the establishment of a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI), the delegation noted that a committee had been appointed to draft a law but it did not work. In 2006, the Prime Minister asked the civil society organisations to draft a law based on the Paris Principles. Then, a mixed Working Group carried out a plan of action for drafting the law. Recently, the Prime Minister proposed to have more discussions on this issue with the CSOs. After these consultations will take place, a national workshop will be organised to collect inputs and recommendations from laws experts and other relevant stakeholders improve the draft and then it will be submitted to the Council of Minister for further legal actions.

22. In relation with a National Preventive Mechanism on Torture, the delegation stated that in order to be in line with the Optional Protocol to CAT, the Government issued in 2009, a sub-decree on the establishment of this mechanism.

23. The delegation noted that in December 2009 the Sub-Committee against Torture (SPT) visited Cambodia for the first time and in December 2013, SPT made the second visit. It visited prisons and police stations and conducted a seminar on the establishment of the national preventive mechanism. The Ministry of Interior and OHCHR hold discussions on the draft law to be in line with OP-CAT.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

24. During the interactive dialogue, 76 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

25. Slovenia commended steps to promote gender awareness and women's rights. It was concerned that the Didactic Code allowed the perception of women's inferior role to be taught in schools and that basic education was still not compulsory. Slovenia made recommendations.
26. Spain expressed concern about recent events that had resulted in fatalities. Efforts to ensure the independence of the legal system had been inadequate. Women encountered serious problems when seeking access to justice and were frequently subjected to slavery-like conditions in third countries. Land ownership and management problems continued to have a particularly adverse impact on the poor. Spain made recommendations.
27. Sri Lanka welcomed progress made towards achieving the MDGs, particularly in gender equality, child mortality, maternal health, combating diseases, child labour and access to education. It commended its establishment of rehabilitation centres for vulnerable groups. It made recommendations.
28. The State of Palestine welcomed efforts to promote the principle of education for all and to address challenges facing the health sector. It made recommendations.
29. Sweden called for a credible investigation into the January 2013 shootings and for the removal of the ban on peaceful assemblies. It was concerned that the draft Cyber Law could restrict freedom of expression. It highlighted the need for reforms of the electoral and legal systems. Sweden made a recommendation.
30. Switzerland was concerned by the regression in the rights to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly and association. It deplored the lack of improvement in judicial independence and was concerned by allegations of racial discrimination. Switzerland made recommendations.
31. Indonesia appreciated efforts to implement the Education Strategic Plan 2009-2013, promote equitable health rights and reduce poverty. However, it believed that there remained room for improvement in promoting and protecting human rights. Indonesia made recommendations.
32. Timor-Leste noted that the right to health was a key priority for Cambodia. It commended its implementation of health policies and strategies and its increased national health budget. It made recommendations.
33. Tunisia welcomed ratification of the CRPD, the CPED and the Optional Protocol to CEDAW. It commended cooperation with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Cambodia. Tunisia made recommendations.
34. Turkmenistan commended ratification of the CRPD, the Optional Protocols to CEDAW and the ICCED. It praised the measures taken in support of persons with disabilities. Turkmenistan made recommendations.
35. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland urged the Government to conduct a credible inquiry into the January 2013 shootings, lift the ban on peaceful assemblies and focus on long-term judicial and political reforms to strengthen democracy and address corruption and the mistreatment of prisoners by the judiciary. It made recommendations.

46. Azerbaijan commended efforts to ensure equitable access to education, develop maternal and child health programmes and strengthen the health system. It also noted measures to promote equality and combat discrimination against women. Azerbaijan made recommendations.

47. Bangladesh noted the priority given to the promotion of women's roles in society. Poverty remained a serious impediment to the full enjoyment of human rights, which should be addressed by creating a conducive trade, economic and financial environment and policies at the global level.

48. Belgium was concerned about the deteriorating human rights situation in several areas and about recent developments with respect to freedom of expression despite some positive developments in the country. Belgium made recommendations.

49. Bhutan appreciated efforts to bring the legal and judicial systems into line with international standards and to promote and protect the rights of vulnerable groups. It noted that challenges remained in reducing poverty in rural areas. Bhutan made a recommendation.

50. Responding to questions concerning the rights of children, women and the elderly, the delegation reiterated the commitment of Cambodia to address these issues. Underscoring that Cambodia is committed to increasing representation of women in senior positions within the Government, the delegation noted the existence of quotas for women for such positions.

51. Concerning the electoral system, the delegation stated that the Government intends to undertake a thorough reform of the entire electoral system shortly, beginning with a national consultation workshop scheduled to take place in the first quarter of 2014 which will involve various stakeholders.

52. On the reform of the judiciary, the delegation stated that it expects the National Assembly to adopt the three fundamental laws on the judiciary in the first quarter of 2014.

53. Regarding the ban on demonstrations and public assembly in place since 4 January 2014, the delegation informed that the ban is in line with the law on peaceful demonstrations, and was very necessary in to restore social order and stability and security for the society at large.

54. With respect to judicial reform under the Fifth Mandate of the National Assembly, the delegation reiterated that the three fundamental laws due to be soon submitted to the National Assembly are: on the status of judges and prosecutors; on the organization of courts; and on the reform of the Supreme Council of Magistracy.

55. Botswana commended legislative measures to eliminate discrimination against women and raise gender awareness. It was concerned by reports of harassment, intimidation, violence, arbitrary arrests, curtailment of freedom of expression and assembly and infringements of judicial independence. Botswana made recommendations.

56. Brazil welcomed ratification of the CRPD and the development of an action plan on child labour, but was concerned by restrictions on freedom of expression and the persistence of gender-based stereotypes in the Didactic Code taught in school. Brazil made recommendations.

57. Brunei Darussalam appreciated measures to promote and protect women's and children's rights and combat gender discrimination and the commitment to improving health services. It welcomed Cambodia's continued cooperation with UN human rights mechanisms. It made a recommendation.

58. Canada asked what measures had been taken to protect the right to freedom of expression, including assurance that the authorities would not use the Criminal Code or violence to restrict that right. It noted progress towards achieving the MDGs relating to child mortality and maternal health. Canada made recommendations.

59. Chad noted Cambodia's accession to most international human rights instruments and that it cooperated with the OHCHR and treaty bodies. It welcomed efforts to ensure the population's enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights. Chad made a recommendation.

60. Chile welcomed the ratification of and accession to a number of human rights treaties and the enactment of legislation to improve the legislative and institutional framework. It encouraged Cambodia to step up its action in that regard. Chile made recommendations.

61. China appreciated efforts to implement previous recommendations and congratulated the early achievement of the MDGs relating to gender equality, child mortality, maternal health, combating HIV/AIDS and establishing global development partnerships. It welcomed ratification of international instruments. It made recommendations.

62. Colombia commended efforts to combat human trafficking, such as the national action plan 2011-2013, and action to implement the CRPD and the Ottawa Convention on the prohibition of anti-personnel mines. Colombia made recommendations.
63. The Democratic Republic of the Congo noted that Cambodia had strengthened its cooperation with the treaty bodies and had recently adopted a new Criminal Code and legislation on anti-corruption and implementing the Civil Code. It encouraged continued efforts to ensure full enjoyment of human rights.
64. Croatia welcomed legislative improvements to ensure better protection of persons with disabilities, ratification of the CRPD, the ICPED and the OP-CEDAW. It was concerned by recent reports of attacks on activists, union members and journalists. It made recommendations.

85. Latvia welcomed the ratification of several human rights treaties and noted with appreciation that Cambodia was a party to the Rome Statute. Latvia made recommendations.

86. Malaysia commended ratification of the CRPD, legal reforms, anti-corruption measures and achievements in the area of education. It welcomed progress made in the empowerment of women and in combating human trafficking. Malaysia made recommendations.

87. Mauritania noted the importance attached to strengthening the institutional and legal framework required for the promotion of human rights. It commended ratification of the Optional Protocols to CEDAW, the CRPD and the CPED.

88. Argentina commended ratification of the CPED and encouraged Cambodia to ratify additional human rights treaties. Argentina made recommendations.
89. Montenegro welcomed adoption of the Criminal Code, the Law on Implementation of the Civil Code and the Anti-corruption Law. It asked whether Cambodia had amended the Didactic Code to delete any reference to the inferior role of women in society and enquired about implementation of the Action Plan to eliminate the worst forms of child labour. Montenegro made recommendations.
90. Referring to Cambodia's cooperation with international human rights mechanisms, the delegation flagged that under the Chairpersonship of Cambodia, the ASEAN Human Rights Declaration was adopted in December 2012. The delegation highlighted Cambodia's great efforts made, including in Geneva, to avail itself of OHCHR technical assistance and guidance, and noted the positive cooperation with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Cambodia, as illustrated by the Special Rapporteur's most recent visit in January 2014. The delegation underscored that the Government will continue with the positive cooperation.
91. Responding again to questions raised on the suppression of recent demonstrations, the delegation remarked that while it appreciates the importance of freedom of expression, it believes such right must be exercised within the framework of national and international laws without infringing on the rights of others, such as the right to security and to property.
92. Turning to the freedom of expression on the internet, the delegation noted that there has not been any restrictions placed to date, and that in drafting the cyber law, the Government will respect the recommendations received and will follow the relevant UN standards.
93. On the prospects for the establishment of a national human rights institution in line with the Paris Principles, the delegation noted that the Government will take this process forward on the basis of the recommendations made by the Special Rapporteur and the Prime Minister, and in consultation with civil society organisations.
94. Responding to questions about the reports of harassment and intimidation against human rights defenders, the delegation underscored that Cambodia has made great efforts to work with civil society including human rights defenders, flagging that the governmental Cambodia Human Rights Committee fully cooperates with OHCHR and civil society organisations.
95. Regarding child labour, the delegation mentioned that the Ministry of Social Affairs and the Ministry of labour have municipal/provincial offices that work to identify cases of child labour. The delegation noted, however, that such cases are not always straightforward given that often parents do not wish their children to be taken out of factories due to poverty.
96. On the current ban on demonstration and public assembly, the delegation added that the ban was introduced temporarily until the situation has improved, and that it applies to public assembly. In this regard, the delegation flagged that the Government is also drafting a law on access to information.
97. Morocco welcomed the willingness of Cambodia to undertake electoral reforms. It commended the mechanism to protect the rights of persons deprived of their liberty, especially the right not to be subjected to torture or ill-treatment. Morocco made recommendations.
98. Myanmar noted with appreciation that Cambodia had achieved five MDGs. It welcomed efforts to establish a national human rights institution and the implementation of a National Plan "Education for All". Myanmar made recommendations.

99. Nepal appreciated the priority given to education, health services and employment, and welcomed measures to prohibit discrimination against women and to enhance their mainstreaming. It appreciated the constructive engagement by Cambodia with the Special Rapporteur. Nepal made recommendations.

100. The Netherlands welcomed the importance attached to freedom of expression and information and freedom of the press and publication. It was concerned about violations of freedom of assembly and association that had affected trade unions and civil society organizations. It made recommendations.

101. New Zealand expressed concern about allegations of fraud, irregularities and violence prior to the 2013 elections and was concerned about challenges faced by human rights defenders, journalists and labour organizers. It made recommendations.

102. Nicaragua welcomed the ratification of international treaties, the enactment of domestic laws, and the adoption of educational, health and housing programmes. It encouraged Cambodia to incorporate the UPR recommendations in its Action Plan to eliminate the worst forms of child labour. Nicaragua made recommendations.

103. Pakistan commended the ratification of international treaties, the creation of human rights protection mechanisms, and the establishment of direct contacts between the Ministry of Women's Affairs and corresponding provincial and municipal departments. Pakistan made recommendations.

104. Poland encouraged Cambodia to comply with recently ratified international human rights treaties. It was concerned about the situation in the justice sector and about excessive use of force during election-related demonstrations and strikes by garment sector workers. Poland made recommendations.

105. Portugal welcomed the creation of the National Council and its regional network. It made recommendations.

106. The Republic of Korea encouraged Cambodia to strengthen its policies to meet people's expectations for enhanced freedom and rights. It regretted the loss of life occasioned by violent measures taken by security forces against garment sector protestors. It made recommendations.

107. Romania noted that Cambodia continued to face serious challenges. It made a recommendation.

108. The Russian Federation noted the efforts made to combat poverty, to achieve sustainable development and to ensure enhanced access to health care and education. It made recommendations.

109. Senegal commended the adoption of national action plans to improve the living conditions of children, women and persons with disabilities. It welcomed measures to combat impunity, especially the establishment of Extraordinary Chambers in the country's courts. Senegal made recommendations.

110. Serbia noted that steps were being taken to establish an independent national human rights institution, to strengthen the independence of judges and prosecutors and to reform the prison system. Serbia made recommendations.

111. Australia expressed concern about restrictions on freedom of assembly and association, particularly recent disproportionate violence against protestors, including detention without trial. Noting allegations of electoral irregularities in 2013, it welcomed the stated commitment to undertake electoral reforms. Australia made recommendations.

112. Slovakia encouraged Cambodia to ratify additional human rights treaties. Referring to reports of intimidation and threats against human rights defenders, it invited Cambodia to engage in a meaningful dialogue with them and to ensure their protection. It urged Cambodia to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur, special procedures and the OHCHR Office. Slovakia made recommendations.

113. On the reports of irregularities in relation to the July 2013 election, the delegation cited the example of the indelible ink and stated that the ink was so effective that it had remained on voters' fingers for a month after the election. The delegation also discredited the reports of irregularities with the voter registration as well as the allegation that the election was not conducted transparently, underlining that effective avenues to address discrepancies or problems were in place.

114. On Cambodia's efforts to combat corruption, the delegation referred to the Anti-Corruption Law which was adopted in 2010 in line with relevant international conventions and the existence of the National Anti-Corruption Council and the national Anti-Corruption Unit. The delegation noted that great efforts were made to disseminate and enforce the Anti-Corruption Law and many offenders have been prosecuted.

115. On the Extraordinary Chambers of in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC), the delegation affirmed that Cambodia strictly follows the internal rules of the Chambers and never interferes with the work of the ECCC. National auditors are in place in order to monitor and prevent corruption within this institution. The delegation also added that Cambodia paid in the past year USD 1.7 million for the utilities, including electricity and transport, and 1.8 million for the salary of the national staff.

116. On land issues, the delegation explained that the land law and other relevant regulations as well as the necessary mechanisms are in place to protect the rights of the people. Once the land is titled, it is for the courts to settle in case of disputes. For individuals who live on state-owned land, they are usually provided with two options, either to accept the development project on the same spot, or to be relocated. For those who live on private land, the Government facilitates a mutually acceptable solution with the private companies concerned.

117. In conclusion, the delegation thanked for all the recommendations received. Noting that these recommendations will be prioritised with indications of the timeline, the delegation stated that Cambodia would draft a human rights action plan on the basis of these recommendations.
