Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its eighteenth session from 27 January to 7 February 2014. The review of Afghanistan was held at the 2nd meeting, on 27 January 2014. The delegation of Afghanistan was headed by Mohammad Qasim Hashemzai, Senior Advisor, Ministry of Justice. At its 10th meeting, held on 31 January 2014, the Working Group adopted the report on Afghanistan.

2. On 15 January 2014, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Afghanistan: Benin, Estonia and the United Arab Emirates.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Afghanistan:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/AFG/1 and Corr.1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/AFG/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/AFG/3 and Corr.1).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Afghanistan through the troika. Those questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review (UPR).

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The head of the delegation affirmed the commitment of Afghanistan to the promotion and the protection of human rights, in particular women's and children's rights. That commitment was evident at the national level in the provisions of the Constitution and various laws, and in policies and plans that had been enacted in accordance with the Constitution and international obligations. The Government had taken major steps to pragmatically implement human rights conventions and to prepare and present national reports on the status of their implementation.

6. Afghanistan had gone through the first UPR cycle in May 2009, and received 143 recommendations. At that time, Afghanistan had declared its support for most of those recommendations; only 10 did not enjoy its support. It had taken the recommendations seriously, undertaking a number of initiatives in various ministries and institutions in Afghanistan. To prepare the report for the second UPR cycle, the Government had established a national process, whereby civil society and human rights institutions had been involved in the process of data collection and report analysis. The report had been prepared on the basis of a plan of action the Government had created in 2012 for follow-up to the recommendations.

7. The Government had actively promoted and protected civil and political rights in Afghanistan. Afghanistan was a good example in the region with respect to promoting freedom of speech, freedom of the media and freedom of associations without censorship.

8. The President of Afghanistan constantly met with representatives of national and international media, human rights activists and women's rights defenders. The High Council of Media, composed of representatives of civil society, media groups and the Ministry of Information and Culture, was working to protect the rights and activities of the media and journalists.

9. Afghanistan was currently preparing for the presidential and provincial council elections. The Government had invited international observers to monitor the process of fair and free elections. According to the Independent Election Commission, in 2013 3,305,799 citizens, 1,140,854 of whom were women, had received voting cards to participate in the elections. Human rights organizations and civil society activists would closely monitor the upcoming elections. The political opposition groups freely organized their political programmes without any intervention from the Government. There were 59 registered political parties in Afghanistan.

10. Afghan citizens had access to health care, education, employment and trade unions.

11. The Constitution guaranteed education as a right of all citizens; education was provided free of charge and in native languages up to the bachelor's degree level.

12. Owing to efforts made by Afghanistan to improve the quality and quantity of education, the following progress had been made between 2009 and 2013:

- Schools had been constructed, increasing the total number from 11,460 schools in 2009 to 15,169 in 2013; of those, 2,267 were allocated to girls
- The number of students had increased from 6,504,715 in 2009 to 8,643,940 in 2013; of those, 3,353,991 were female
- A total of 135 million books had been printed between 2009 and 2013, at a cost of US$ 90 million
- The number of students enrolled in vocational schools had increased from 18,296 in 2009 to 71,625 in 2013; 11 per cent of those were female
- The number of training centres for literacy had increased from 20,031 in 2009 to 26,486 in 2013, providing courses to 563,460 students
- Total enrolment in higher education had increased from 52,000 in 2009 to 220,000 in 2013

13. In accordance with the Constitution, the Government was obliged to provide free health services for all Afghan citizens without any discrimination.

14. With respect to health services, various policies and strategies had been developed. Of particular note were: the public health programme entitled "Health for all Afghans", covering the period 2012–2020; the System Enhancement for Health Action in Transition project, aimed at supporting health-care provision for the period 2013–2018; the Health and Human Rights Strategy and the Gender Strategy; and the Health Financing Policy 2012–2020.

15. Recent data indicated that substantial improvements had been made in the health-care sector. For example, the maternal mortality ratio had dropped from 1,600 to 327 deaths per 100,000 live births, the under-five mortality rate had been reduced from 257 to 97 deaths per 1,000 live births and the infant mortality rate had decreased from 129 to 77 deaths per 1,000 live births. About 46 per cent of infants had received the measles vaccination and the rate of polio vaccination had increased from 50 to 95 per cent.

16. The main challenge, however, was the lack of security in some of the remote areas of Afghanistan. Terrorist groups targeted schools, hospitals and other public-service institutions. Teachers, health workers, women activists and childcare staff were considered to be the most targeted groups.

17. The Government continued the process of legal reform in the light of the international conventions that Afghanistan had ratified. The Government had reviewed 73 laws, 34 regulations and 27 strategies, including the Civil Code, the Penal Code, the Juvenile Code, the Elimination of Violence against Women Law and the Citizenship Law.

18. Women's rights and gender equality remained a top priority for the Government. Afghan women constituted 27 per cent of legislators in the Parliament. Women occupied 25 per cent of government jobs, including 9 per cent of those at decision-making levels. Girls currently represented about 40 per cent of the nearly 9 million children attending school in Afghanistan. About 30 per cent of the school teachers and 15 per cent of the university lecturers were women. In terms of the workforce in other areas, Afghan women constituted 24 per cent in the health-care sector, 5 per cent in security and 30 per cent in agriculture. Women also accounted for 20 per cent of the enrolment in higher education and 35 per cent of the participants in vocational training. Women represent at least 50 per cent of those working in the country's independent media and civil society groups.

19. In addition to fostering greater participation of women in the above-mentioned sectors, the Government had adopted various measures for the protection of women and the prevention of violence against them in the previous four years. Of particular note were: (a) the adoption of the Elimination of Violence against Women Law; (b) the establishment of special prosecution offices for cases of violence against women; (c) the establishment of the High Commission for Prevention of Violence against Women and provincial offices thereof in 23 provinces; (d) the establishment of 16 protection centres/shelters for women victims of family violence; (e) the establishment of departments of women's affairs in 32 provinces; (f) the establishment of gender units in 22 ministries; and (g) the establishment of a gender and human rights unit within the police academy.

20. The Government was developing a national plan of action on women, peace and security for beyond 2014, with a view to adopting additional measures to increase the participation of women, to prevent violence against women and to provide relief and recovery services.

21. The Government had adopted appropriate measures to ensure that children were protected against all forms of discrimination or punishment on the basis of the legislative provisions of the Labour Law, the Juvenile Code and the human trafficking law and of the policy provisions and activities under, inter alia, the National Strategy for Children at Risk and the national plan of action on children in armed conflict. Afghanistan had also received from the United Nations a 15-point road map on further implementation of the national plan of action on children in armed conflict that the Government intended to approve and implement.

22. The Government continued to stand firm in fighting corruption. Several measures, including the adoption of the Anti-Corruption Law and the establishment of civil and military anti-corruption prosecution units and tribunals, had been taken.

23. The Constitution prohibited torture and inhuman, humiliating and cruel punishment under all circumstances. In order to track torture-related cases, human rights units and supervisory boards had been established in the Ministry of the Interior, the National Directorate of Security and the Ministry of Defence. The second report of Afghanistan under the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT) was being prepared and would be submitted in September 2014.

24. Afghanistan still faced a number of challenges, relating to terrorism, extremism, narcotics and insecurity in some parts of the country, that had slowed progress in the area of human rights and the implementation of transitional justice.

25. Poverty and corruption had made it difficult to tackle those challenges. The scarcity of resources to finance a nationwide welfare programme was another challenge.

26. Afghanistan was a war-torn country that had achieved enormous gains and successes in the previous 12 years in various areas, including human rights; those achievements had been won in the face of exceptionally tough conditions and ongoing challenges.

27. Afghanistan was strongly determined to take effective measures to strengthen its capabilities, in collaboration with the international community.

28. The head of the delegation concluded his introductory remarks by stating that the implementation of programmes and reforms aimed at promoting and protecting human rights in Afghanistan required the cooperation and participation of all governmental bodies and civil society, as well as direct cooperation and support from the international community, in particular international organizations active in the area of human rights. He expressed hope that Afghanistan would gradually witness greater improvements in human rights.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

29. During the interactive dialogue, 88 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II below.

30. Azerbaijan commended the measures taken in the areas of health care, poverty reduction and child trafficking and action to improve the social, economic and educational status of internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees.

31. Bangladesh noted the new legislation and measures concerning violence against women; the rights of persons with disabilities, children and women; gender equality; access to health care; and poverty reduction.

32. Belgium welcomed the progress made since the first UPR cycle.

33. Sri Lanka welcomed the progress made in combating terrorism and insecurity.

34. Morocco welcomed the adoption of several national plans of action.

35. Brazil noted the improvements in school and university enrolment.

36. Canada enquired about measures to ensure the implementation of the Elimination of Violence against Women Law.

37. Chile recognized the efforts made by Afghanistan to advance human rights.

38. China welcomed the State's efforts to strengthen human rights mechanisms.

39. Comoros noted that the State's achievements were particularly impressive, given its situation of quasi-civil war.

40. Croatia enquired about measures to prevent girls from being charged with "running away"/"moral crimes".

41. Cuba welcomed the ratification by Afghanistan of human rights treaties and the adoption of legal standards in the areas of health care, education, employment and discrimination against women.
42. The United States of America expressed concern about violence against women, the punishment of victims of trafficking and family abuse, and violations by national security forces.
43. Denmark expressed concern about the lack of equal opportunities for women, domestic violence, trafficking in women, “honour killings” and forced marriage.
44. Djibouti expressed its appreciation of the action taken to restore the rule of law and to promote human rights.
45. Ecuador welcomed the establishment of the High Peace Council and human rights support units in various ministries, as well as the adoption of electoral reforms.
46. France commended the promulgation of the Elimination of Violence against Women Law of 2009.
47. Estonia noted with regret the setbacks in implementing core international human rights instruments.
48. Ethiopia encouraged Afghanistan to take further action to implement revised legislation, to alleviate poverty and to promote sustainable peace and development.
49. Finland enquired about the implementation of Security Council resolution 1325 (2000) and related resolutions and the application of legislation on eliminating violence against women.
50. Egypt commended the State’s efforts to combat terrorism, narcotics and corruption.
51. Germany noted that more women enjoyed their human rights and actively engaged in society, but a commitment to gender equality was lacking.
52. Greece noted that women continued to be subjected to forced marriage and honour killings.
53. Hungary expressed concern about arbitrary police arrests, ill-treatment in detention, violence and discrimination against women, the rights of IDPs and the culture of impunity.
54. Iceland expressed concern about gender equality, violence against women, child marriages, low female representation in decision-making and access by girls to education.
55. India commended the adoption of electoral legislation and the establishment of the Electoral Complaints Commission.
56. Indonesia commended the establishment of human rights support units in some ministries, the development and implementation of strategies and programmes, and efforts to strengthen legal and administrative frameworks.
57. The Islamic Republic of Iran expressed its appreciation for the National Development Strategy, the national priority programmes, judicial reforms and action to counter corruption and drug trafficking.
58. Iraq commended efforts to combat terrorism, which represented the greatest challenge to the protection of human rights.
59. The delegation of Afghanistan responded to some of the questions raised in the interactive dialogue. Regarding the Elimination of Violence against Women Law, the delegation stated that the Government strongly believed in the implementation of the law, emphasizing that perpetrators of violence against women would be prosecuted and punished.

60. Regarding elections and access to voting for women, the delegation noted that polling stations would be staffed by female workers and that women would be able to vote separately.

61. Regarding human rights defenders and female politicians, the Government had assigned three police protection officers to each provincial department of the Ministry of Women's Affairs. Security forces had been trained and advised to take the necessary measures to support and protect female politicians.

62. The delegation emphasized that Afghanistan recognized and condemned violence against women and all other forms of discrimination against them. It affirmed the State's commitment to implementing all international conventions to which Afghanistan was a party.

63. The delegation asserted that the people of Afghanistan were inspiring survivors and not hopeless victims. The Government remained firm in its commitment to implementing human rights standards and was constitutionally bound by all international treaties that it had ratified and by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

64. The delegation confirmed that the process for developing the national plan of action on women, peace and security included women at all levels of the negotiations and decision-making process.

65. Regarding the use of torture, the delegation stated that any confession obtained through any act of torture, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment was not valid and was inadmissible as evidence in a court of law. All prison officers had guidelines that included instructions not to engage in torture; using torture to obtain a confession was punishable by law.

66. Ireland expressed its concern that the Elimination of Violence against Women Law had not been effectively implemented.

67. Italy asked whether relevant International Labour Organization (ILO) conventions and education measures would be implemented to address child labour.

68. Japan raised concerns about judicial delays and failures and about the torture of detainees. It commended measures promoting and protecting women's rights.

69. Kazakhstan welcomed the incorporation of numerous provisions of international human rights treaties in domestic legislation.

70. Kuwait commended the establishment of the High Peace Council and human rights support units in ministries, as well as the development of a public health vision.

71. Latvia welcomed new legislation aimed at eliminating violence against women, and the State's accession to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court.

72. Libya urged the Government, the international forces and the Taliban to refrain from targeting civilians and to reduce the number of civilian victims, particularly children and older people.

73. Lithuania expressed concern about violence against women, and about the proposed increased control of the media.

74. Malaysia welcomed measures to improve detention conditions, to prohibit the recruitment of child soldiers and to strengthen law enforcement.

75. Maldives urged the State to comply with its obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and to continue efforts to address the situation of children, forced labour and access to education.
76. Mauritania encouraged Afghanistan to take more vigorous action to implement human rights legislation.
77. Mexico welcomed the State's ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Convention against Discrimination in Education and Protocols I and II Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949.
78. Montenegro asked how legal reforms would incorporate international standards, in particular those set out in CEDAW.
79. Bosnia and Herzegovina requested further details on how the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission addressed challenges such as insecurity and obstacles to good governance.
80. Nepal expressed its appreciation for the reforms to strengthen institutional, legislative and policy mechanisms and the special attention paid to vulnerable groups.
81. The Netherlands welcomed the advances in human rights and, in particular, women's rights.
82. New Zealand welcomed progress in women's rights, the work of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission and legislation on prisons and detention centres.
83. Nicaragua noted the State's limited institutional, legislative and financial capacity to address the persistent serious challenges stemming from drug trafficking and terrorism.
84. Nigeria urged Afghanistan to promote increased participation by women in the provincial council legislatures.
85. Norway expressed concern about violence against women and the failure to investigate and prosecute cases in that area.
86. Pakistan commended the legislative action taken to eliminate discrimination against women and to improve their political, social and economic status.
87. The Philippines welcomed the State's ratification of international human rights instruments and its adoption of the Elimination of Violence against Women Law.
88. Poland expressed concern about the failure to implement the Elimination of Violence against Women Law, the persistent gender inequalities and the recruitment of child soldiers.
89. Portugal expressed concern about the setbacks in women's rights and about the number of acts of violence against women and girls.
90. Qatar commended the vigorous action taken to protect children from exploitation in the armed conflict.
91. The Republic of Korea expressed concern that the Elimination of Violence against Women Law did not criminalize honour killing.
92. Romania noted the serious challenges faced in building a fully functional State.
93. The Russian Federation emphasized the importance of the national dialogue between the Government and representatives of civil society.
94. The delegation referred to measures taken by Afghanistan to combat the trafficking of people in Afghanistan, including the implementation of the law on human trafficking. Afghanistan also enforced and implemented all provisions of the International Convention on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. The Government had recently conducted campaigns against illegal migration.

95. The Government of Afghanistan had worked closely with various partners to establish support centres for victims of human trafficking and illegal migration. Such centres provided victims with educational and integration support.

96. Regarding the situation of persons with disabilities, the delegation confirmed that the number of disabled persons in the country was high. There were currently 105,000 disabled persons registered in Afghanistan.

97. The delegation stated that article 49 of the Constitution and article 4 of the Labour Law prohibited child labour in Afghanistan. The minimum age for employment was in accordance with the relevant ILO convention. The Government was currently working with ILO and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to draft a new child code that directly addressed all children's rights-related issues.

98. Saudi Arabia commended the steps taken to enact new legislation and introduce institutional reforms.

99. Singapore noted the efforts to prevent police and security force abuse and illegal and arbitrary detention.

100. Slovakia asked how allegations of torture and ill-treatment would be investigated.

101. Slovenia expressed its appreciation of the State's efforts to enhance the status of women.

102. South Sudan expressed its appreciation of the adoption of measures to promote women's rights and gender equality.

103. Spain welcomed the reduced imposition of the death penalty in recent years.

104. Bhutan commended initiatives on the rights of vulnerable groups and on eliminating violence against women.

105. The State of Palestine encouraged Afghanistan to incorporate the provisions of the Convention against Discrimination in Education into national legislation.

106. The Sudan commended the State's accession to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol thereto.

107. Australia acknowledged the progress made in strengthening women's rights.

108. Switzerland expressed its concern at discrimination and violence against women.

109. Tajikistan noted the steps taken to strengthen legislation to eliminate discrimination against women.

110. Thailand commended the adoption of human rights-related legislation and the State's accession to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, but noted with concern discrimination against women, ill-treatment of female prisoners and violence against children.

111. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia encouraged Afghanistan to impose a moratorium on executions with a view to abolishing the death penalty.

112. Tunisia encouraged Afghanistan to take more vigorous action to implement the Elimination of Violence against Women Law.

113. Turkey commended strategies and programmes that prioritized human rights, but noted that the Elimination of Violence against Women Law remained largely unenforced.

114. Turkmenistan commended the establishment of the High Peace Council and the human rights support units in various ministries, as well as the adoption of electoral reforms.

115. The United Arab Emirates enquired about the role assigned to the human rights system for the transformation decade 2015–2015.

116. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland asked how the authorities would build on their response to the 2013 report on the mistreatment of detainees.

117. The Czech Republic acknowledged the achievements made since 2009, but noted that more progress was needed to implement key UPR recommendations.

118. Uruguay welcomed the legislative and other reforms adopted in the light of international treaties, and the draft Shiite personal status law.

119. Uzbekistan commended the strengthening of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission, the establishment of human rights units in ministries and the reforms of the electoral system.

120. Viet Nam expressed its view that security, reconciliation and better social, economic and cultural conditions would be the foundation for the full enjoyment of rights and freedoms.

121. Yemen welcomed the enactment of the Juvenile Code, the Elimination of Violence against Women Law, the Law on Combating the Financing Terrorism, the Labour Code, Anti-Corruption Law and the Law on Countering Abduction and Human Trafficking.

122. Albania requested more information on plans to address impunity for honour killings. It expressed concern about acts against freedom of expression.

123. Algeria noted that further efforts were required to promote human rights, particularly in the areas of judicial reform, the fight against discrimination and the strengthening of human rights institutions.

124. Argentina encouraged Afghanistan to take more vigorous action to implement the Elimination of Violence against Women Law.

125. Sweden welcomed the enactment of the Elimination of Violence against Women Law, but noted that women continued to suffer discrimination and abuse.

126. Austria expressed its concern about impunity and called for further efforts to ensure accountability.

127. Bahrain noted that, notwithstanding intensified efforts to promote gender equality, discrimination against women and girls persisted.

128. Kyrgyzstan commended the measures taken to improve the quality and quantity of education and to strengthen the legal and institutional framework pertaining to educational equality and non-discrimination.

129. The delegation recalled that the combined initial and second periodic reports on the implementation of CEDAW had been considered in 2013; it would provide the Committee its national plan of action for that implementation. The committee responsible for reviewing the Penal Code and other laws would do so in the light of the international human rights conventions to which Afghanistan was a party. Afghanistan intended to accede to the Optional Protocol to CEDAW.

130. The delegation confirmed that forced marriage and child marriage were still major challenges in Afghanistan. However, the Government had taken specific measures regarding that issue, including: the signing by relevant bodies of the Protocol for the Elimination of Violence against Women and the Elimination of Child and Forced Marriages; the incorporation of forced and child marriage as a crime in the Family Law and the Elimination of Violence against Women Law; and awareness-raising through media campaigns, workshops, seminars and campaigns at the provincial level. Regarding “running away”, the delegation confirmed that running away from home was not a crime. The Government would not punish a woman or a girl for running away from home unless crimes were associated with that act. Regarding the media, the country’s record had improved over a period of 12 years; there were currently more than 55 television stations, 150 radio stations and 1,000 printing and publication companies in the country. Article 34 of the Constitution recognized freedom of speech. Journalism-related issues were regulated by the Law on Mass Media. A number of amendments had recently been made to the Law on Mass Media for the benefit of media organizations and journalists. The delegation confirmed that media organizations could prepare their programmes free of censorship by or intervention from the Government. However, oversight of and support activities for media organizations were carried out through the Ministry of Information and Culture and the High Council of Media.

131. Regarding the role of women in the peace process in Afghanistan, the delegation confirmed that the Government believed in the Afghan-led peace process, with the participation of women and the inclusive structure of peace negotiations. In addition to the nine female members of the High Peace Council, several members of the provincial peace committees and the Secretariat of the High Peace Council were women. The High Peace Council activities were guided by a gender-balance strategy that guaranteed the presence of women at the negotiations table.

132. The head of the delegation stated that the Penal Code criminalized honour killing and that perpetrators of such crimes were not exonerated. The Penal Code was currently under review; the article on honour killing most probably would be revised in line with the State’s commitment to the international community and CEDAW.

133. Regarding the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission, the head of the delegation stated that the Commission had been established in accordance with the Afghan Constitution and General Assembly resolution 48/134. The principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles) had also been considered during the recent selection of the members of the Commission. The Commission was the most influential institution monitoring human rights in Afghanistan and maintained its independence. A total of US$2 million had been allocated for its budget: US$500,000 for 2012 and US$1.5 million for 2013.

134. The delegation stated that a legal aid programme had been set up and that there was a law on legal aid, which benefited women and girls in particular; the aid was free of charge.

135. The head of the delegation concluded his remarks by thanking all international partners and human rights monitoring bodies for their continued and fruitful assistance and cooperation, which helped Afghanistan strengthen its commitment to human rights. He expressed his gratitude to all those countries that supported and helped Afghanistan and that were interested in the issues of Afghanistan, and to all those who had participated in the Working Group. The head of the delegation thanked the President of the Council and the participants for the interactive discussions. He stated that the people of Afghanistan were striving towards development and the enjoyment of human rights in a nation affected by generations of war and terrorism. He affirmed the State’s commitment to respecting, promoting and protecting human rights.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations**

136. The recommendations formulated during the interactive dialogue and listed below have been examined by Afghanistan and enjoy its support:
