Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its nineteenth session from 28 April to 9 May 2014. The review of Norway was held at the 1st meeting on 28 April 2014. The delegation of Norway was headed by Mr. Børge Brende, Minister of Foreign Affairs. At its 10th meeting held on 2 May 2014, the Working Group adopted the report on Norway.
2. On 15 January 2014, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Norway: Congo, Indonesia, and United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Norway:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/19/NOR/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/19/NOR/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/19/NOR/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Czech Republic, Germany, Mexico, Netherlands, Portugal, Slovenia, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Liechtenstein, Spain, was transmitted to Norway through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation stated that the UPR mechanism is an important pillar of the Human Rights Council. Human rights were well protected in Norway and the delegation reaffirmed Norway's longstanding commitment to human rights at both the international and national levels. In preparing the national report, Norway consulted civil society.
6. The Norwegian state is established on the territory of two peoples: the Norwegians, and the Sami, who are recognised as an indigenous people. There are five national minorities in Norway: Kven, Jews, Forest Finns, Roma and Romani.
7. In order to strengthen and simplify the legal framework on discrimination, the Government was currently working on a new comprehensive equality and anti-discrimination act. The delegation reaffirmed Norway's continuous fight against forced marriage and female genital mutilation.
8. In response to questions from the Netherlands and Portugal, the delegation stated that the Government had decided to establish a new independent national institution for human rights in compliance with the Paris Principles.
9. The delegation stated that combatting domestic violence was a priority for the Government. Domestic violence is totally unacceptable, and perpetrators must expect to be prosecuted and punished. Important measures to combat domestic violence are prevention and early identification, help and protection for victims, prosecution and treatment of perpetrators, and competence-building within the police and welfare services.

10. As regards minor asylum seekers, the delegation stated that the Government attached great importance to ensuring a rapid asylum process with due legal safeguards for those children as well as good living conditions during the process.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

11. During the interactive dialogue, 89 delegations made statements. Recommendations made appear in Section II of this report.

12. Iraq noted Norway's accession to CRPD and ratification of OP-CAT as well as efforts to establish a National Human Rights Institution aimed at making recommendations to improve the situation.

13. Ireland noted the concerns expressed by the Committee against Torture and the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention about the lack of statistics on use of solitary confinement. It also noted that in 2012 the ICC had recommended that the national human rights be downgraded from A to B status.

14. The Islamic Republic of Iran expressed concern about a number of human rights issues.

15. Israel drew attention to a survey by Norway's Jewish community which revealed that anti-Semitism and anti-Jewish harassment persisted. It asked what concrete measures would be adopted to strengthen and support efforts to combat anti-Semitism.

16. Italy noted that despite efforts statistics on cases of domestic violence had not improved since the first UPR cycle.

17. Japan, noting the unequal status of immigrants in the labour market and the low employment rate for immigrant women, encouraged Norway to take further steps to address such issues.

18. Jordan noted that the Human Rights Commission for incorporating a number of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights in the Norwegian Constitution.

19. Kyrgyzstan noted the measures to combat violence against children contemplated in the new action plan against domestic violence.

20. Libya highlighted the action being taken by Norway to protect the rights and well-being of children.

21. Malaysia enquired about the Government's plan of action on establishing a new NHRI and whether a timetable had been set to move the process forward. It encouraged the Government to implement the key national priorities set for its human rights agenda.

22. The Maldives said that new anti-discrimination legislation, particularly providing accessibility for persons with disabilities, would help ensure equal opportunities in the work place. However, more efforts were needed to promote tolerance and respect for diversity.

23. Mexico recognized legislative and institutional advances made since the first UPR cycle such as ratification of international instruments and legislation against discrimination. It encouraged Norway to establish a NHRI as soon as possible in accordance with the Paris Principles.

24. The Republic of Moldova noted Norway's progress in implementing the recommendations of the first UPR cycle and its international and national efforts to combat human trafficking, but that challenges remained regarding procedures and criteria for identifying victims of trafficking.

25. Montenegro recognized steps the Government had taken to promote human rights and implement new mechanisms to address problem areas, in particular discrimination and domestic violence.

26. The Netherlands noted the external review of the Norwegian Centre for Human Rights, which was not in compliance with the Paris Principles, and highlighted concerns about the situation of detainees, specifically the length of police custody.

27. New Zealand encouraged Norway to move to full implementation of the CRPD, particularly regarding the use of coercion in mental health care and noted the Government's desire to reduce such use of coercion in that particular circumstance.

28. Nicaragua noted that the growing number of women victims of trafficking and the prevalence of violence against women in Norway remained a concern. It encouraged the country to continue its leadership role in the Council and promoting dialogue and cooperation between countries.

29. Niger noted new legislation enacted to combat discrimination, especially on grounds of ethnicity, religion and disability, and measures adopted to respect and promote the rights of indigenous peoples, minorities, refugees and asylum-seekers.

30. Nigeria invited Norway to accede to the OP-ICESCR and urged it to continue improving conditions for migrants and to denounce racial discrimination in more practical terms. It also urged it to expedite the process to establish a fully-fledged NHRI.

31. Pakistan was encouraged by efforts made by Norway to implement the recommendations from the first UPR cycle and steps taken over the past four years to protect and promote human rights in the country.

32. Paraguay highlighted advances in human rights in Norway, but expressed concern that between 20 and 30 per cent of murders committed in Norway during the past decade were within couples.

33. The Philippines believed that Norway had much to share in best practices for protecting and promoting human rights, but regretted that it had still not acceded to the ICRMW, despite its steadfast advocacy for equality and non-discrimination.

34. The Norwegian delegation, in response to questions concerning the situation of the Roma, stated that improving the situation of the Roma was a priority for the Government. Norway was supporting measures for social inclusion of the Roma through 80 programmes in 10 European countries.

35. A grant scheme has been established to provide humanitarian assistance to foreign beggars. Migrant Roma have not been targets of serious hate crime.

36. In response to a question from Mexico on consultations between the Central Government and the Sami Parliament, the delegation informed that those consultations are to be undertaken in good faith, with the objective of achieving agreement. The consultation mechanism ensures that decision-makers are well acquainted with the views of the Sami Parliament.

37. In response to a question by Mexico on how the indigenous people participate in decisions with regard to the use of land and natural resources, the delegation referred to the Finnmark Act which established the Finnmark Estate. This independent entity owned all the land in Finnmark county that previously belonged to the State. The Sami Parliament appoints half of the Finnmark Estate board members.

38. In response to a question from Germany regarding indigenous peoples and mining activities, the delegation emphasized that the mineral industry plays an important role in securing jobs and development in rural areas. Norwegian legislation has a number of provisions that safeguard Sami interests in this context.

39. In response to a question from the Netherlands, concerning the legal definition of rape, the delegation emphasized that rape is a serious and totally unacceptable crime. In the Penal Code rape is defined by listing factors that negate consent. The Government's ambition was to reduce the number of rapes, to assist victims in the best possible way, and to improve the way rape cases were handled in the criminal justice system.

40. In response to a question from the Netherlands in relation to the prolonged stays in police holding cells, the delegation stated that Norwegian regulations required detainees to be transferred from police custody to a normal prison within 48 hours of their arrest, unless practical considerations make this impossible.

41. In response to questions from the Netherlands and Ireland in relation to the use of solitary confinement in detention, the delegation informed that major improvements have been made in this area in recent years. The courts may approve isolation only if stringent conditions are satisfied, and the time limits were strict. There has been a significant reduction in the use of this measure, which is normally reserved for the most serious cases and lasts for only short periods. Concerning solitary confinement during the execution of sentences, the delegation described measures to ensure that solitary confinement is applied more selectively.

42. In response to questions and recommendations from Mexico and Kyrgyzstan on education for minor asylum seekers, the delegation informed that all children in Norway have the same legal right and duty to attend primary and lower secondary school, regardless of their background.

43. In answering the United Kingdom's question concerning the standard of emergency shelters and social housing especially for families with children, the delegation stated that Norwegian municipalities are obliged to find temporary accommodation for persons who are not able to find accommodation by themselves. These accommodations must have a level of quality in accordance with the needs of the persons concerned.

44. In responding to the question from Mexico on export of arms or munitions, it was stated that Norway has a strict, long-standing arms export policy. Norway does not permit the sale of arms or munitions to areas of war, civil war or threat of war.

45. In response to a question from Spain, the delegation answered that the UN Guiding Principles for Business and Human Rights, were a cornerstone of the Government's approach to human rights and business.

46. Responding to Israel's question about concrete measures and budget allocations to fight anti-Semitism, Norway emphasised that knowledge is a key factor and described measures aimed to prevent anti-Semitism in schools.

47. Responding to questions from inter alia Malaysia, Paraguay, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia and East Timor about the pay gap between women and men, the delegation stated that the pay gap has decreased over time but that women on average continue to earn 12.7 per cent less than men per hour, primarily due to the gender divided labour market. The Government's ambition is to further decrease this pay gap.

48. In response to recommendations from Italy and New Zealand concerning the use of coercion in mental health care, the delegation emphasized that the Government will continue efforts to reduce coercion in the mental health services. The use of coercion is strictly regulated by law and can only be a last resort in order to care for patients with serious mental health illness.

49. In response to recommendations that Norway should accede to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of all Migrant Workers and Members of their Families (ICRMW), the delegation answered that Norway has ratified all ILO core conventions on workers' rights, which also apply to residents who are foreign nationals. Norway has however decided not to accede to the ICRMW.

50. The delegation noted that some States recommended that Norway should accede to the Optional Protocols on a communications procedure to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, to the Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. The delegation stated that the Government was thoroughly investigating the legal implications before making a decision. Two legal studies have been commissioned and circulated for general review. These questions were still under consideration.

51. As concerns the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, Norway is currently considering the question of ratification.

52. In response to questions from Mexico and others concerning hate crime, the delegation underlined the seriousness of such offences and reiterated that crime committed on the basis of hate towards specific groups is considered an aggravating circumstance by the courts. The delegation informed about amendments passed to the Penal Code in 2013 to expand criminal liability of certain kinds of statements made in public to include statements made on the internet.

53. Poland noted efforts made by Norway to comply with the recommendations of the first review, but acknowledged that, despite many positive developments in the field of human rights, certain challenges remained.

54. Portugal observed that the drop-out rate in upper secondary schools in Norway was higher among immigrant students. It requested further information about the Government's ongoing process to re-establish its NHRI.

55. The Russian Federation drew attention to problems relating to freedom of belief. It also noted that, when children were removed from parental care and placed with new families, insufficient attention was paid in some cases to their cultural, linguistic and religious identity. Moreover, foster children had reportedly been subjected to violence.

56. Rwanda noted efforts made by Norway to fulfil its human rights commitments since its last UPR, including improving gender equality and accessibility for persons with disabilities and combating forced marriage, FGM and domestic violence. It also commended Norway for handling the cases of Genocide suspects by prosecuting and extraditing them.

57. Saudi Arabia expressed concern about persistent cases of domestic violence, rape and hate crimes, which targeted certain ethnic groups and minorities, particularly Muslims. It urged the Government to take vigorous action against hate crimes and to promote equality of all citizens.

58. Serbia acknowledged positive developments in strengthening human rights in the country. It suggested that Norway further step up efforts to address discrimination of vulnerable groups in the context of its national integration policy.

59. Sierra Leone commended Norway's generous contribution of overseas development assistance. It stressed the importance of developing strategies to promote tolerance and diversity and strengthening measures to ensure greater equality for women and minorities.

It was concerned about reports of hate speech and hate crime against minority groups, asylum-seekers and immigrants.

60. Slovenia recognized Norway as an example of safeguarding democracy, ensuring the rule of law and focusing efforts on addressing key human rights challenges facing member States in the turbulent global world of today.

61. South Africa expressed its appreciation for the continued and consistent contribution of Norway to development projects in Africa. It noted efforts made by Norway since its last review and encouraged it to continue in its efforts towards the promotion, protection and fulfilment of human rights in the country.

62. Spain noted that the Norwegian Government had decided to establish a new independent international human rights institution and that measures were being taken to tackle the problem of gender-based violence.

63. Cuba expressed concern about persistent discrimination against Romani, indigenous and immigrant communities, incitement to hatred, and xenophobic, anti-Semitic and Islamophobic statements.

64. The State of Palestine noted that Norway had taken measures to ascertain the nature, extent and causes of discrimination in various areas of society.

65. The Sudan enquired about the main achievements and lessons learned through the implementation of the Action Plan to Promote Equality and Prevent Ethnic Discrimination.

66. Switzerland expressed concern regarding the duration of police custody and of solitary confinement in both police custody and pretrial detention. It was also concerned about allegations of arbitrary deprivation of liberty and arbitrary constraint measures in mental health-care centres.

67. Thailand noted with interest the establishment of Children's Houses providing assistance to child victims of exploitation and abuse.

68. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia referred to treaty body concerns regarding gender inequality and inadequate representation of women with minority backgrounds in prominent societal roles. It enquired about the results of the work undertaken by KOMpakt, the Government's consultative body, and requested details of the 2013 white paper concerning domestic violence.

69. Timor-Leste noted that there were areas, such as gender equality, equal remuneration for men and women, and the right to education of indigenous peoples, in which further improvements were required.

70. Togo expressed concern about discrimination against the immigrant population, especially in the labour market, housing, education and health care.

71. Tunisia encouraged Norway to ratify the CPED and to expedite the establishment of a national human rights institution that complied with the Paris Principles.

72. Turkey the increase in Islamophobic, anti-Semitic and racially motivated hate crimes.

73. Turkmenistan expressed concern about reports of an increase in xenophobic attitudes to immigrants. It noted with regret that trafficking in persons, particularly girls, remained a problem reports that the number of victims was steadily increasing.

74. Ukraine noted the establishment of an inter-ministerial coordination group to strengthen the implementation of recommendations accepted by Norway and improve its reporting to the human rights treaty bodies.

75. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland urged Norway to intensify its efforts to ensure that emergency shelters and social housing units met an adequate standard, especially for families with children, and to strengthen strategies to prevent discrimination against migrant Roma and provide for their basic needs.

76. The United States of America was concerned that preventive measures had not reduced the incidence of domestic violence and rape and by the high level of acquittals, lenient sentences and the legal definition of rape, which required the use or threat of force. It was furthermore concerned by the treatment of asylum-seekers and stateless persons, especially minors.

77. Uruguay encouraged Norway to complete the process of ratification of the Optional Protocols to ICESCR and the CRC on communications.

78. Uzbekistan noted concerns about discrimination against immigrants, particularly in the labour market, education, health care and housing, expressions of racial hatred and intolerance, especially against the Sami people, as well as high rates of violence against women and trafficking.

79. Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) expressed concern about the persistence of crimes motivated by prejudice and incitement to hatred against specific minority groups, such as the Roma.

80. Viet Nam noted that Norway's strengthened legal framework better ensured gender equality and improved living standards for indigenous peoples and minorities. Norway participated in education and training and international cooperation in the field of human rights, and was committed to the protection of vulnerable groups.

81. Albania said that Norwegian citizens benefited from the highest standards of democracy and freedom. Norway had developed human rights standards in respect of gender equality, the rights of persons with disabilities and those of minorities.

82. The Norwegian delegation stated, in relation to a question by Spain and Liechtenstein and recommendations from the United States of America on asylum and immigration and, that the Government will continue to follow its international obligations in the areas of migration and asylum policies.

83. The Government maintained that the Asylum System was a key tool in providing protection to those who were genuinely in need, and that it must not be abused. Asylum status is granted on the basis of individual processing and a thorough assessment of the application.

84. Iran, Moldova, Nicaragua raised issues concerning trafficking in human beings. The delegation described inter alia Norway's 2010 action plan on measures to fight all forms of human trafficking, safe housing and appropriate follow-up of victims and provisions in the Immigration Act strengthening the protection of victims. The question of establishing a National Referral Mechanism to identify and assist victims of trafficking in a better way was being assessed.

85. Responding to questions from Russia, Turkey and India, the delegation stated that protection of children was the purpose of the Child Welfare Act. A care order is only relevant if the child's situation was serious, and the situation could not be alleviated through the application of voluntary assistance measures. The underlying principle in the Act was that a child should grow up with its biological parents. A decision for a care order can only be made if the child is subjected to serious care deficiency or abuse. Here we cannot compromise, the child always comes first.

86. Responding to questions from, among others, Sudan, Iran, Mexico, Nigeria and Poland about ethnic discrimination, Norway referred to the Action Plan to promote equality and prevent ethnic discrimination.
87. Algeria encouraged Norway to expedite the process of establishing a new national human rights institution and to ratify the ICRMW.
88. Angola, while noting Norway's progress in human rights, not least in gender equality issues, drew attention to the continuing problem of integration of migrants, since that group suffered the highest levels of unemployment.
89. Argentina noted that Norway had indicated that it would make ratification of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance a priority. It shared Norway's concern about and commitment to the elimination of discrimination.
90. Armenia appreciated the help provided to the survivors of the Armenian Genocide and Norway's integration policy for migrants and minorities and its commitment to the elimination of hate speech and hate crime.
91. Australia observed that the UPR report highlighted Norway's consistent promotion of human rights and democratic principles. Norway had introduced four new anti-discrimination acts in January 2014, covering sexual orientation, gender equality, ethnicity and persons with disabilities.
92. Austria recognized the high standards that Norway had achieved in the promotion and protection of human rights, its contributions to the system of international human rights protection and its commitment to the advancement of human rights globally.
93. Azerbaijan highlighted concerns about discrimination against migrants, persons from immigrant backgrounds, asylum-seekers and refugees in accessing public and health services and employment, and allegations of ill-treatment and hate speech towards minorities and other vulnerable groups.
94. Bahrain expressed concern about reports of discrimination against minorities and indigenous peoples, especially women and children. It was also concerned about persistent hate speech and incitement to xenophobia and to religious hatred.
95. Bangladesh observed that Norway had not yet ratified the ICRMW and that there remained scope for further attention to preventing discrimination against immigrants.
96. Belarus expressed concern about migrant integration and employment issues and the problems encountered by Roma, especially in the education system. It was also concerned about reports of incitement to hatred and other forms of intolerance, including by political parties.
97. Benin noted that Norway had ratified a number of international conventions on human rights, including CRPD and OP-CAT, as follow up to the implementation received in 2009.
98. Botswana noted efforts made to address discrimination against migrants and asylum-seekers, but encouraged Norway to do more to prevent violence. It also noted that challenges remained in gender mainstreaming and in combating substance abuse by children and young people.
99. Brazil referred to policies introduced to encourage gender equality, religious tolerance and access to social security by foreign residents. It indicated that immediate attention should be given to the best interests of the child, specifically in all immigration matters, and to the situation of migrants.

100. Canada asked what progress Norway had achieved since 2009 in generating data on manifestations of racial discrimination and the position of minority groups in order to identify patterns of direct and indirect discrimination.

101. Chile noted that human rights had been strengthened through recent amendments to Norway's Constitution. It noted that the country had the capacity to renew its efforts to tackle domestic violence, promote equality of opportunity and combat all forms of discrimination.

102. China noted the progress made in protecting children's rights and in combating domestic violence and human trafficking. However, violence against women continued, Roma and migrants suffered discrimination and the Sami language and culture could not be guaranteed.

103. The Republic of Congo noted that more action was required to combat discrimination against women, minorities, indigenous peoples and persons of foreign origin. The detention of minors with adults was a cause for concern.

104. Costa Rica noted Norway's ratification of international human rights instruments, the measures introduced to combat discrimination against minorities, its commitment to asylum-seekers and refugees.

105. Cote d'Ivoire noted the institutional and legislative reforms undertaken by Norway in respect of human rights, including gender equality, the rights of persons with disabilities, national minorities, migrants and asylum-seekers.

106. Sri Lanka noted the progress made in the area of children's rights but stated that gender equality remained a challenge; higher education programmes were gender-divided and women earned lower wages than men. It acknowledged that targeted measures were being taken to tackle the high unemployment rate among immigrants.

107. The Czech Republic noted Norway's efforts to improve access to education for Roma; reducing absenteeism required addressing the underlying social causes and the full cooperation of all stakeholders, including parents.

108. Denmark indicated that continuous monitoring and reporting of the human rights situation in Norway would be essential to track results of efforts made. It welcomed work on the draft Nordic Sami Convention, which would advance the rights of the Sami across country boundaries.

109. Ecuador was concerned with the situation of ethnic minorities, particularly the Roma and with the high number of complaints by migrants of ill-treatment at the hands of the police and other representatives of the State.

110. Egypt urged Norway to address concerns regarding the treatment of migrants and to investigate allegations of racial profiling by law enforcement officers, refoulement of asylum-seekers and disappearances of unaccompanied minors from asylum centres.

111. Estonia said that Norway had taken positive steps in ratifying international human rights instruments and in protecting the rights of indigenous peoples and minorities, including LGBTI.

112. Finland asked what targeted measures were being taken to ensure that more immigrant women could find work. Noting the disappearance of children from reception centres, it asked how Norway was working to protect children who sought asylum from becoming victims of trafficking.

113. France asked how Norway would make combating violence against women and children a priority and how it would ensure that sick children had equal access to health care in different parts of the country.

114. Gabon recognized Norway's commitment to human rights and its ratification of human rights instruments. Norway combated inequalities in society and in particular was tackling the gender pay gap. What results had been achieved through the equality and anti-discrimination action plan?

115. Germany appreciated the efforts Norway had undertaken in response to recommendations made in the previous cycle and recognized Norway's very good national and international human rights record.

116. Ghana noted Norway's commitment to upholding human rights, while expressing concern that certain minorities were the target of hate crime and racism. Efforts should be intensified to address the gender pay gap.

117. Greece noted a persistence of hate speech as noted by the Human Rights Committee and asked what action was being taken to fight it. It also expressed concern that Norway's NHRI had been downgraded.

118. Guatemala noted the progress made in human rights in Norway but shared concerns at reports that over half of the immigrant population suffered discrimination in accessing employment, housing, education and health.

119. Honduras acknowledged Norway's efforts to improve employment among immigrants by providing language training. It further noted the country's efforts to combat violence and rape.

120. Hungary considered the amendment to the Constitution to be a positive step, but sought clarification of the reference to the Church of Norway as the national church. Unaccompanied asylum-seeking children between the ages of 15 and 18 years suffered discrimination.

121. Iceland noted Norway's commitment to achieving gender equality, combating domestic violence and violence and sexual abuse against children and young people. It asked whether Norway intended to strengthen its assistance to victims of trafficking.

122. India noted the discrimination experienced by immigrants and asylum-seekers in gaining access to public services and employment. A high incidence of rape had been found, with half of victims being below the age of 18. Violence and hate speech persisted.

123. Indonesia noted Norway's firm commitment to human rights. It requested that Norway should ensure the protection of all minors in conflict with the law, taking into account the principle of the best interests of the child.

124. Romania highlighted developments in human rights in Norway since the previous UPR and a comprehensive mid-term report. It sought more information on human rights education in the country.

125. The Norwegian delegation stated in response to a recommendation from Denmark concerning a Nordic Sami Convention, that Norway, Sweden and Finland commenced negotiations on a Nordic Sami Convention in 2011. The aim is to complete the negotiations within 2016.

126. In response to questions, the Norwegian delegation informed about Norway's action plan on domestic violence. Information was also provided inter alia on the right to free legal aid to victims of domestic violence, the duty of local authorities to provide shelter services and co-ordinated assistance for victims, and recent amendments to the Penal Code to increase the penalty level for abuse in close relationships.

127. Referring to questions from Libya and Thailand concerning investigation of offences against children, the delegation informed about the judicial examination of children which was carried out in special Children's Houses, by specially trained police officers, and about measures aimed at reducing the waiting time before such examination.

128. In response to a question from Brazil, the delegation underlined the importance of the best interest of the child in immigration cases, which is always a primary consideration. Regarding a question from Austria, the delegation described challenges and dilemmas concerning unaccompanied minor asylum seekers.

129. Referring to Angola's and Armenia's questions about integration of immigrants, Norway said that participation in working life and good Norwegian language skills are keys to integration in Norwegian society. The Government will strengthen the language training and make the Introduction Programme more adapted to each individual.

130. In conclusion, Norway noted with appreciation the participation of all delegations in the review.
