Information provided by stakeholders

A. Background and framework

1. Scope of international obligations²

1. Amnesty International (AI) welcomed the steps taken by Grenada towards ratifying a number of core human rights instruments, including the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination. It indicated that while recognizing that the country did not have the capacity to ratify all the treaties recommended during the review, Grenada committed to consider the ratification of a number of international human rights instruments during its first Universal Periodic Review (UPR) in 2010,³⁴

2. Joint Submission 2 (JS2), Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative (CHRI) and AI, all recommended that Grenada ratify the ICCPR-OP 2.⁵ JS2 also recommended that Grenada ratify the Protocol to the American Convention on Human Rights to Abolish the Death Penalty.⁶

3. AI called on Grenada to sign, ratify and implement key international human rights treaties, including the CAT, with technical and financial support by the United Nations and Inter-American systems as necessary.⁷

4. AI further called on Grenada to ratify and implement the ICPED, with technical and financial support of the United Nations and Inter-American systems as necessary.⁸

5. AI also called Grenada to sign, ratify and implement the Inter-American Convention to Prevent and Punish Torture, the Inter-American Convention on the Forced Disappearance of Persons, the Inter-American Convention against Racism, Racial Discrimination and Related Forms of Intolerance, the Inter-American Convention against All Forms of Discrimination and Intolerance and the Inter-American Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Persons with Disabilities, with technical and financial support of the United Nations and Inter-American systems as necessary.⁹

2. Constitutional and legislative framework

6. Joint Submission 1 (JS1) indicated that Grenada started a constitutional reform process in 2013. It recommended that the country extend constitutional protections against discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender identity and expression; and that it harmonize national legislation with international conventions and give these precedence over national legislation.¹⁰

7. AI also called on Grenada to include in national legislation, and particularly as part of the on-going review of the Constitution, sexual orientation and gender identity as basis for protection from discrimination and to establish and implement policies and initiatives to address discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity.¹¹

8. AI called on Grenada to approve appropriate constitutional provisions in order to abolish the death penalty, as part of the on-going review of the Constitution.¹²

B. Cooperation with human rights mechanisms

1. Cooperation with treaty bodies

9. CHRI recommended that Grenada demonstrate its commitment to the United Nations human rights mechanisms by complying with its treaty reporting obligations.¹³

2. Cooperation with special procedures

10. CHRI recommended that Grenada extend an open invitation to all special procedures of the United Nations Human Rights Council.¹⁴ AI noted Grenada's request, during its first UPR, for technical and financial support from the United Nations, including to extend an open and standing invitation to the special procedures of the Human Rights Council.¹⁵

C. Implementation of international human rights obligations, taking into account applicable international humanitarian law

1. Equality and non-discrimination

11. JS1 indicated that in Grenada, there is still much stigma and discrimination against LGBT people, together with strong public sentiments against equality movements. Considerable stigma continues to exist, partly fuelled by public expressions against homosexuality by religious leaders.¹⁶ JS1 recommended that Grenada conduct training of health-care to police officers and workers and take every necessary measure, such as legislation, training, policies among others, to eliminate such discrimination both in the public and private sphere.¹⁷

12. CHRI indicated that there is no explicit legislation against discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity in Grenada. CHRI recommended that Grenada promote and facilitate constructive dialogue on sexual orientation and gender identity with stakeholders, including government ministries, civil society and religious leaders. It further recommended that Grenada introduce policies aimed at ending discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity.¹⁸

13. AI called on Grenada to implement human rights education and anti-discrimination awareness-raising programs in collaboration with local human rights organizations working on behalf of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.¹⁹

2. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

14. Referring to recommendations rejected by Grenada during its first review under the UPR,²⁰ on the abolition of the death penalty and on adopting a formal moratorium, JS2 indicated that while no executions have been carried out for decades, Grenada's retention of the death penalty keeps open the possibility of reinstating executions. There is no formal moratorium on executions and the government has expressly opposed any international intent to abolish the death penalty. Grenada's method of execution by hanging has been condemned by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights as degrading and inhumane. JS2 recommended that Grenada abolish and/or declare a formal moratorium on the death penalty; refrain from seeking the reinstatement of the death penalty; take necessary measures to ensure compliance with the highest standards of due process and ensure that domestic laws meet the most rigorous level of review applicable to cases involving the death penalty. It further recommended that Grenada ensure full compliance with the decisions of the Inter-American Commission and specifically decisions involving individual cases and precautionary measures related to the death penalty.²¹ CHRI also recommended that Grenada formally abolish the death penalty.²²

15. AI called on Grenada to establish an official moratorium on executions with a view to abolishing the death penalty, as provided by four United Nations General Assembly resolutions adopted since December 2007, including most recently resolution 67/176 of 20 December 2012. It further called on Grenada to support calls to abolish the death penalty nationally and internationally, including by voting in favour of the United Nations General Assembly resolution on a moratorium on the use of the death penalty.²³

16. Global Initiative to End All Corporal Punishment of Children (GIEACPC) indicated that in Grenada, corporal punishment of children is still lawful, despite repeated recommendations by the CRC, the HR Committee and recommendations made during the first cycle of the UPR.²⁴

17. CHRI noted that during the first UPR, Grenada rejected recommendations to eliminate corporal punishment of children and to prohibit the use of corporal punishment at home or in educational facilities. Nevertheless, the country affirmed its commitment to encouraging its non-application.²⁵

18. GIEACPC noted that the Criminal Code allows the use of force at home, under the 'authority to correct a child, servant or other similar person, for misconduct'. Article 65 states that force may be used by parents and others with parental authority against children under 16 'for the purpose of correction' and 'for misconduct or disobedience to any lawful command'. The 'authority for correction' may be delegated to others, and such delegation is presumed in the case of schoolteachers. It further noted that the 2010 Domestic Violence Act defines domestic violence as 'any controlling or abusive behaviour that harms the health, safety or well-being of a person or any child' but this is not interpreted as prohibiting all violent punishment in childrearing. There is no prohibition of corporal punishment in the 1998 Child Protection Act or the 2010 Child (Protection and Adoption) Act.²⁶

19. GIEACPC indicated that the Criminal Code provides for the use of 'justifiable force' by teachers for the purpose of 'correction' (articles 54, 55 and 56). The 2002 Education Act authorises the use of corporal punishment and punishes its infliction contrary to the specified regulations (art 53).²⁷

20. GIEACPC hoped that States will make specific recommendations to ensure that the 2012 Juvenile Justice Act, which would prohibit corporal punishment in the penal system, is brought into force and that legislation is drafted and enacted to prohibit corporal punishment of children in all settings as a matter of priority.²⁸

3. Right to privacy

21. CHRI noted that during the last UPR, Grenada affirmed its commitment to raise awareness of the rights of the LGBT community and to encourage tolerance. CHRI noted that consensual adult male same-sex conduct remains a criminal offence. It noted however, that the law makes no provision for same-sex sexual activities between women. CHRI and also JSI recommended that Grenada work towards repealing the relevant Section of the Criminal Code.²⁹

22. AI noted that while during its first UPR, Grenada committed to continue to raise awareness of the issue and to encourage tolerance, according to local groups working on behalf of LGBTI persons, no public awareness campaigns have been undertaken since the last review.³⁰ AI also called on Grenada to repeal all laws prohibiting and punishing consensual same-sex relations, including in the Criminal Code.³¹

4. Freedom of expression

23. CHRI recommended that Grenada ensure that all allegations of government interference in the work of media are diligently investigated by an impartial and independent body; and adopt a Right to Information Act that corresponds with international best practice.³²

5. Right to health

24. JS1 indicated that the Grenada Criminal Code also impedes public health efforts in the fight against HIV/AIDS.³³ JS1 recommended that Grenada ensure healthcare facilities adopt policies, and have measures in place to sanction persons who violate these regulations.³⁴
