In 2011, the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography recommended the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child.¹⁰ The Special Rapporteur on the human right to safe drinking water and sanitation recommended that the United States of America ratify ICESCR and the Optional Protocol thereto, as well as the other core international human rights treaties it had not ratified to date.¹¹ In 2013, the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) recommended that the United States ratify OP-CRC-IC.¹² In 2014, the Committee against Torture (CAT)¹³ and the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD)¹⁴ encouraged the United States to consider ratifying ICPPED. CERD also encouraged ratification of ICESCR, CEDAW, CRC, ICRMW and CRPD.¹⁵ In 2014, the Human Rights Committee (HR Committee) recommended that the United States reconsider its position regarding its reservations and declarations on the Covenant with a view to withdrawing them¹⁶ and encouraged it to consider acceding to ICCPR-OP2.¹⁷

2. In 2014, the Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business encouraged the Government to take steps to ratify the core ILO conventions.¹⁸ CERD called upon the United States to ratify the ILO Forced Labour Convention (No. 29) and ILO Minimum Age Convention (No. 138).¹⁹

10. The Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment noted the invitation extended, but requested that the Government reconsider its terms, to enable him to visit every part of the detention facility at Guantanamo Bay and to conduct unmonitored interviews.³⁶

C. Cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

11. The United States made annual financial contributions to OHCHR activities, including the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture.³⁷

III. Implementation of international human rights obligations, taking into account applicable international humanitarian law

A. Equality and non-discrimination

12. In 2014, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights urged the United States authorities to conduct in-depth examinations into how race-related issues were affecting law enforcement and the administration of justice, both at the federal and state levels.³⁸ In 2013, special procedures mandate-holders called upon the Government to examine laws that could have a discriminatory impact on African Americans, and to ensure that such laws were in compliance with the country's international legal obligations.³⁹

13. CERD reiterated its concern that the definition of racial discrimination used in federal and state legislation and in court practice was not in line with the Convention. It called upon the United States to, inter alia, prohibit racial discrimination in all its forms and broaden the protection afforded by law.⁴⁰

14. CERD reiterated its concern at the lack of prohibition of racist hate speech and the underreporting of hate crimes.⁴¹

15. The HR Committee⁴² and CERD⁴³ remained concerned about the practice of racial profiling and surveillance by law enforcement officials targeting certain ethnic minorities. The HR Committee and CERD urged the State to combat racial profiling, inter alia by expanding protection against profiling on the basis of religion, religious appearance or national origin.

16. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women stated that multiple forms of discrimination against certain groups of women made them more vulnerable and exacerbated the negative consequences that violence had upon them. The implementation of policies and programmes must address the structural challenges which were often both the causes and consequences of violence against women.⁴⁴

B. Right to life, liberty and security of the person

17. While welcoming the increasing number of states that had abolished the death penalty, the HR Committee remained concerned about the continuing use of the death penalty and about racial disparities in its imposition. The Committee recommended that the United States consider establishing a moratorium at the federal level and engage with retentionist states with a view to achieving a nationwide moratorium.⁴⁵ CAT made a similar recommendation.⁴⁶ The HR Committee also recommended ensuring that retentionist states provide adequate compensation for persons who were wrongfully convicted.⁴⁷ The United States voted against the draft General Assembly resolution on a moratorium on the use of the death penalty in 2014.⁴⁸

18. In 2012, the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions noted that the Government had supported the UPR recommendation⁴⁹ to determine the factors in the racial disparity in the application of the death penalty and to prepare strategies aimed at ending discriminatory practices, indicating that further statistical analysis and studies on sentencing disparities were highly anticipated.⁵⁰

19. The Special Rapporteur called on the federal and state administrations to ensure that the death penalty was not imposed on the mentally ill.⁵¹ In 2014, two special procedures mandate holders stated that imposing capital punishment on individuals suffering from psychosocial disabilities was a violation of death penalty safeguards.⁵² The Secretary-General stated that the use of untested means of execution had demonstrably increased the risk of executions amounting to cruel and unusual punishment.⁵³

20. In 2014, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights expressed concern at the disproportionate number of young African Americans who had died in encounters with police officers, or who were in prisons and on death row.⁵⁴ CERD reiterated its concern at the brutality and excessive use of force by law enforcement officials against members of racial and ethnic minorities, which had a disproportionate impact on African Americans and undocumented migrants crossing the United States-Mexico border.⁵⁵ CAT expressed similar concerns.⁵⁶

21. CERD was concerned at the large number of gun-related deaths and injuries, which disproportionately affected members of racial and ethnic minorities, particularly African Americans. It urged the United States to reduce gun violence by, inter alia, adopting legislation expanding background checks for all private firearms transfers and reviewing the “stand your ground” laws.⁵⁷ The HR Committee⁵⁸ and the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences⁵⁹ made similar recommendations.

22. The HR Committee was concerned about the use of lethal force by Customs and Border Protection (CBP) officers and urged the State to ensure that the new CBP directive on the use of deadly force was enforced.⁶⁰

23. The Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions reiterated his recommendation that the Government systematically track and publicly disclose information on civilian losses resulting from its international operations.⁶¹ CRC urged the State to prevent indiscriminate use of force, and ensure that children and families who were victims of attacks received compensation.⁶²

24. The Special Rapporteur reiterated his recommendations that the Government specify the basis for decisions to kill, rather than capture, “human targets” in the context of an armed conflict, and whether the State in which the killing took place had given consent. It should also specify procedural safeguards in place to ensure in advance that targeted killings complied with international law.⁶³

25. CAT regretted that a specific offence of torture had not yet been introduced and reiterated its recommendation that torture be criminalized at the federal level, and that penalties be commensurate with the gravity of that crime.⁶⁴ The HR Committee was concerned about the lack of comprehensive legislation criminalizing all forms of torture.⁶⁵ CAT reiterated its view⁶⁶ that the United States should take effective measures to prevent acts of torture, not only in its sovereign territory but also in any territory under its jurisdiction.⁶⁷

26. In 2013, the Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment urged the Government to ensure that solitary confinement was only imposed, if at all, in very exceptional circumstances,⁶⁸ and indicated that keeping a person in solitary confinement for more than four decades clearly amounted to torture.⁶⁹ CAT and the HR Committee were concerned about the practice of prolonged solitary confinement, and recommended, inter alia, that solitary confinement regimes be banned.⁷⁰

27. CAT urged the United States to ensure that no one was held in secret detention under its de facto effective control and reiterated that such detention constituted per se a violation of the Convention.⁷¹

28. The Special Rapporteur on torture noted that, allegedly, around half of the detainees who remained indefinitely in detention at Guantanamo Bay had been cleared for transfer and resettlement; others had been designated for further indefinite detention. He also noted that recommendations made during the UPR called on the authorities to ensure that all remaining detainees be tried without delay or released.⁷² Several special procedures mandate holders stated that, even in extraordinary circumstances, when the indefinite detention of individuals, most of whom had not been charged, went beyond a minimally reasonable period of time, that constituted a flagrant violation of international human rights law and in itself constituted a form of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment.⁷³ The High Commissioner for Human Rights made similar remarks.⁷⁴ In 2014, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention considered that a two-year delay in allowing an individual to challenge his detention was a grave violation, further aggravated by his continued detention.⁷⁵

29. CAT recommended that the State party prevent and combat violence in prisons and places of detention.⁷⁶ In 2011, the Special Rapporteur on violence against women took note of the general over-incarceration of women, commonly for non-violent crimes,⁷⁷ and recommended considering alternatives to incarceration.⁷⁸

30. The HR Committee was concerned that domestic violence continued to be prevalent.⁷⁹ CERD had similar concerns and called upon the United States to prevent and combat violence against women, particularly against American Indian and Alaska Native women, and provide them with access to justice and effective remedies.⁸⁰ The Special Rapporteur on violence against women recommended, inter alia, that the State address the disproportionate impact that violence had on poor, minority and immigrant women;⁸¹ and re-evaluate mechanisms at federal, state, local and tribal levels for protecting victims and punishing offenders.⁸² CAT urged the State to eradicate sexual violence in the military.⁸³ The Special Rapporteur on violence against women made similar recommendations.⁸⁴

31. The HR Committee urged the State to combat trafficking in persons by, inter alia, investigating allegations of trafficking and providing remedies to victims.⁸⁵ CRC was concerned that the State was applying a very narrow definition of what constituted human trafficking and who was eligible for relief.⁸⁶

32. CRC was deeply concerned that protection services for sexually exploited children were severely lacking. It urged the United States to establish the specialist services required for children who had been trafficked, sold for sexual or economic exploitation or otherwise been victims of crimes under OP-CRC-SC.⁸⁷ CRC recommended the prohibition of child prostitution and the sale of children at federal and state level, and the decriminalization of the involvement of children in prostitution.⁸⁸ The Special Rapporteur on the sale of children made a similar recommendation.⁸⁹

33. The HR Committee was concerned about corporal punishment of children in schools, penal institutions, the home and all forms of child care at federal, state and local levels. The United States should, inter alia, put an end to corporal punishment in all settings and encourage non-violent forms of discipline as alternatives to corporal punishment.⁹⁰

34. CRC urged the State to prevent the sale of children for the purpose of child labour by, inter alia, combating the worst forms of child labour, especially in the agricultural sector.⁹¹

35. CRC recommended that the United States raise the age of voluntary recruitment into the armed forces to 18 years,⁹² and enact a prohibition on arms exports to countries where children could be recruited into armed conflict.⁹³

C. Administration of justice, including impunity and the rule of law

36. The HR Committee urged the State to strengthen safeguards against wrongful sentencing to death and to ensure that retentionist states provided adequate compensation for persons who were wrongfully convicted;⁹⁴ amend regulations and policies which had a racially disparate impact and ensure the retroactive application of the Fair Sentencing Act.⁹⁵ CERD had similar concerns.⁹⁶

37. CAT recommended that the United States ensure that all instances of police brutality and excessive use of force by law enforcement officers were investigated promptly, effectively and impartially by an independent mechanism, with no institutional or hierarchical connection between the investigators and the alleged perpetrators; and provide effective remedies and rehabilitation to the victims.⁹⁷

38. The HR Committee recommended that the United States enact legislation to explicitly prohibit torture, ensure that the law provided for penalties commensurate with the gravity of such acts, and ensure the availability of compensation to victims of torture.⁹⁸ CAT recommended that the United States ensure that appropriate rehabilitation programmes, including medical and psychological assistance, were provided to all victims of torture and ill-treatment;⁹⁹ and that all relevant staff, including medical personnel, were trained to identify cases of torture in accordance with the Manual on the Effective Investigation and Documentation of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (the Istanbul Protocol).¹⁰⁰

39. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women recommended the enactment of laws criminalizing sexual abuse and other misconduct towards prisoners, covering not only guards and correctional officers, but also all individuals who worked in prisons, including volunteers and government contractors,¹⁰¹ and strengthening institutional oversight to prevent rape and sexual abuse in prisons.¹⁰²

40. CERD reiterated its concern at the denial of access to justice, and adequate reparation or satisfaction for damages suffered, to indigenous women. It urged the United States to guarantee the right to access justice and effective remedies to all indigenous women who were victims of violence.¹⁰³ CERD also reiterated its recommendation that the United States ensure that public legal aid systems were adequately funded and supervised.¹⁰⁴

41. In 2012 and 2013, the High Commissioner for Human Rights expressed disappointment at the failure to close the Guantanamo facility,¹⁰⁵ and urged the Government to close it promptly.¹⁰⁶ The HR Committee¹⁰⁷ and several special procedures¹⁰⁸ made similar remarks and calls. HR Committee also recommended that the system of administrative detention without charge or trial be ended and that any criminal cases against detainees held in Guantanamo and in Afghanistan be dealt with through the criminal justice system rather than military commissions.¹⁰⁹ CAT and CERD had similar concerns.¹¹⁰

42. HR Committee recommended that cases of unlawful killing, torture or other ill-treatment, unlawful detention or enforced disappearance during international operations be investigated, that perpetrators be prosecuted and that victims be provided with remedies.¹¹¹ The Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions made similar remarks.¹¹²

43. In 2014, the High Commissioner for Human Rights,¹¹³ the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights while countering terrorism¹¹⁴ and the Special Rapporteur on torture¹¹⁵ welcomed the release of the report of the United States Senate Select Committee on Intelligence on CIA interrogation practices. The Special Rapporteur on Torture noted that the release of the report contributed to fulfilling the obligations of the United States with respect to the truth.¹¹⁶ The Special Rapporteur on counter-terrorism stated that the individuals responsible for the criminal conspiracy revealed in the report must be brought to justice and face criminal penalties commensurate with the gravity of their crimes.¹¹⁷

44. CRC urged the State party to investigate cases of torture and/or ill-treatment of detained children, and ensure that perpetrators were brought to justice and sanctioned with penalties commensurate with their crimes.¹¹⁸

45. CERD was concerned at racial disparities in the juvenile justice system. It called upon the United States to address racial disparities in the application of disciplinary measures and ensure that juveniles were not transferred to adult courts and were separated from adults during pretrial detention and after sentencing. CERD reiterated its recommendation to abolish life imprisonment without parole for those under 18 at the time of the crime, and to commute the sentences of those currently serving such sentences.¹¹⁹ The HR Committee,¹²⁰ CAT¹²¹ and CRC¹²² made similar recommendations.

46. CRC noted with concern that the United States continued to arrest and detain children in Department of Defense custody. The Committee urged the State to, inter alia, ensure that children under the age of 18 were handled by the juvenile justice system in all circumstances; grant UNICEF and other humanitarian agencies immediate and unimpeded access to detained children, and ensure that children in detention had access to free legal advisory assistance; ensure that no children were transferred to Afghan custody if there were substantial grounds for believing that there was a danger of their being subjected to torture and ill-treatment;¹²³ and ensure that children detained in Department of Defense custody had access to adequate recovery and reintegration measures.¹²⁴

D. Right to privacy and family life

47. HR Committee was concerned about surveillance of communications in the interests of protecting national security and recommended, inter alia, that the State party ensure that any interference with the right to privacy complied with the principles of legality, proportionality and necessity, regardless of the nationality or location of the individuals whose communications were under direct surveillance.¹²⁵ The Committee also recommended that the United States ensure that any interference with the right to privacy, family, home or correspondence be authorized by laws that, inter alia, specified in detail the precise circumstances in which any such interference might be permitted, the procedures for authorization, and the limit on the duration of surveillance; and provide for effective safeguards against abuse.¹²⁶

48. CERD remained concerned at the previous and continued removal of indigenous children from their families and communities through the United States child welfare system. It called upon the United States to enforce the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978, to halt the removal of indigenous children from their families and communities.¹²⁷

E. Right to participate in public and political life

49. UNESCO stated that the United States should review its systems for protection of the confidentiality of journalists' sources.¹²⁸

50. CERD was concerned at the obstacles faced by individuals belonging to racial and ethnic minorities and indigenous peoples to effectively exercise their right to vote. It recommended that the State, inter alia; enforce federal voting rights law throughout the State; ensure that indigenous peoples could effectively exercise their right to vote; and ensure that all states reinstated voting rights for persons convicted of a felony who had completed their sentences.¹²⁹

F. Right to work and to just and favourable conditions of work

51. The Working Group on transnational corporations and other business called on the Government to ensure that all workers were able to exercise their rights in accordance with the ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work.¹³⁰

52. CERD called upon the United States to review its laws to protect migrant workers from exploitative working conditions and raise the minimum age for hazardous work in agriculture in line with international labour standards.¹³¹ The HR Committee¹³² and CRC¹³³ made similar calls.

53. CRC was concerned at the dearth of legislation regarding child labour and child economic exploitation in the agricultural sector. It urged the United States to adopt a coordinated strategy for combating the worst forms of child labour, especially in the agricultural sector; and review laws at federal and state level to ensure that the minimum age of 16 years, with or without parental consent, also applied to small farms.¹³⁴ The Working Group on transnational corporations and other business recommended that the rights of children be protected in the context of agricultural business activities.¹³⁵

G. Right to social security and to an adequate standard of living

54. While appreciating the steps taken to address homelessness, the HR Committee was concerned about the criminalization of people living on the street and of homeless people, and urged the State to, inter alia, abolish the related laws.¹³⁶ CERD had similar concerns.¹³⁷

55. While acknowledging the positive steps taken by the State to address discrimination in access to housing, CERD remained concerned at the degree of racial segregation and poverty in neighbourhoods characterized by substandard conditions and services. It urged the State to investigate all cases of discriminatory practices and provide remedies.¹³⁸

56. In 2014, special procedures mandate-holders expressed concerns about household water disconnection in Detroit.¹³⁹ In 2011, the Special Rapporteur on water and sanitation stated that the United States needed to develop a national water policy¹⁴⁰ and make more efforts to reach the poorest segments of the population.¹⁴¹ The Special Rapporteur recommended the adoption of a comprehensive federal law on water and sanitation guaranteeing the rights to safe water and sanitation without discrimination.¹⁴²

H. Right to health

57. The HR Committee expressed concern about the exclusion of millions of undocumented immigrants and their children from coverage under the Affordable Care Act, and the limited coverage of undocumented immigrants and immigrants under Medicare and Children's Health Insurance. The HR Committee recommended facilitation of access to health care under the Affordable Care Act by undocumented immigrants, and immigrants and their families residing lawfully in the States for less than five years.¹⁴³ CERD raised similar concerns.¹⁴⁴

58. The HR Committee said that the State should ensure that non-consensual use of psychiatric medication, electroshock and other restrictive and coercive practices was generally prohibited, and promote psychiatric care aimed at preserving the dignity of patients.¹⁴⁵

I. Right to education

59. While welcoming the formation of the Equity and Excellence Commission in 2011, CERD remained concerned that students from racial and ethnic minorities continued to attend segregated schools. CERD recommended, inter alia, the adoption of a plan to address racial segregation in schools and neighbourhoods and the promotion of racially integrated learning environments.¹⁴⁶

60. CRC was concerned that children detained in the United States detention facilities in Afghanistan had been almost totally deprived of access to education. It urged the State to provide all detained children under the age of 18 with access to education.¹⁴⁷

J. Minorities and indigenous peoples

61. In 2012, the Special Rapporteur on indigenous peoples noted that securing the rights of indigenous peoples to their lands was of central importance to their socioeconomic development, self-determination and cultural integrity.¹⁴⁸ Despite positive aspects of existing legislation, new measures were needed to advance reconciliation with indigenous peoples and to provide redress for persistent deep-seated problems. Federal authorities should identify, develop and implement such measures in full consultation and coordination with indigenous peoples.¹⁴⁹ The Special Rapporteur called for measures of reconciliation and redress, including initiatives to address outstanding claims regarding treaty violations or non-consensual takings of traditional lands¹⁵⁰ and issues of self-governance, environmental degradation, language restoration and federal recognition.¹⁵¹

62. The HR Committee welcomed the support for the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.¹⁵² It was however concerned about the insufficiency of consultation with indigenous peoples on matters of interest to their communities. The United States should protect the sacred areas of indigenous peoples against desecration, contamination and destruction and ensure that consultations were held with the indigenous communities that might be adversely affected by the State's development projects and exploitation of natural resources.¹⁵³ CERD raised similar concerns through its early warning and urgent action procedure.¹⁵⁴

63. The Special Rapporteur on indigenous peoples noted the support of the United States for the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples,¹⁵⁵ and stated that the federal courts should interpret, or reinterpret, relevant doctrine, treaties and statutes in the light of the Declaration, in regard both to the nature of indigenous peoples' rights and the nature of federal power.¹⁵⁶

K. Migrants, refugees and asylum seekers

64. CAT was concerned at the use, under certain circumstances, of a mandatory detention system to hold asylum seekers and immigrants, on arrival, in prison-like detention facilities.¹⁵⁷ The HR Committee recommended that policies of mandatory detention and deportation of certain categories of immigrants be reviewed.¹⁵⁸ UNHCR urged the United States to, inter alia, utilize detention as a means of last resort for asylum-seekers.¹⁵⁹

65. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women recommended that the root causes of the increasing number of immigrant women in prisons and detention facilities be addressed.¹⁶⁰

66. CRC welcomed the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, under which unaccompanied children were provided with a temporary permit to remain in the United States.¹⁶¹ It recommended that the State party ensure, inter alia, that foreign immigrant children victims of offences covered by OP-CRC-SC were not returned or deported; that they were provided with all the necessary services for their recovery; and that every unaccompanied child was appointed an independent child advocate and was represented in all immigration court proceedings by a qualified attorney.¹⁶² CRC also recommended that the United States ensure that child labour legislation specifically focused on unaccompanied minor foreign nationals who had been brought to or who had arrived in the country for purposes amounting to economic exploitation.¹⁶³ UNHCR urged the United States to, inter alia, refrain from using the detention of children for deterrence purposes and improve the repatriation procedures to ensure that returns were carried out in a safe and dignified manner.¹⁶⁴

67. CERD was concerned at the increased use of racial profiling to determine immigration status and to enforce immigration laws, and called upon the United States to, inter alia, guarantee access to legal representation in all immigration-related matters.¹⁶⁵

68. The Special Rapporteur on summary executions noted progress in tracking deaths of immigration detainees but indicated that the Government should also ensure accountability.¹⁶⁶

L. Environmental issues

69. CERD was concerned that individuals belonging to racial and ethnic minorities and indigenous peoples continued to be affected by the negative health impact of pollution caused by the extractive and manufacturing industries. It called upon the United States to ensure, inter alia, that federal legislation prohibiting environmental pollution was enforced, and any remaining radioactive and toxic waste cleaned up urgently.¹⁶⁷ CERD also called upon the United States to prevent activities of transnational corporations registered in the State which could have adverse effects on the enjoyment of human rights by local populations in other countries.¹⁶⁸

70. The Special Rapporteur on the implications for human rights of the environmentally sound management and disposal of hazardous substances and wastes recommended that the United States continue to assist the Marshall Islands to protect the environment and to secure hazardous sites,¹⁶⁹ and guarantee the right to effective remedy through adequate compensation for past and future claims, and other forms of reparation.¹⁷⁰

M. Human rights and counter-terrorism

71. The HR Committee was concerned about the practice of targeted killings in extraterritorial counter-terrorism operations using unmanned aerial vehicles, and the lack of accountability for the resulting loss of life.¹⁷¹ It urged the United States to disclose the criteria for drone strikes, including the legal basis for specific attacks; to take all feasible measures to protect civilians in specific drone attacks and to track and assess civilian casualties, and all necessary precautionary measures in order to avoid such casualties; and provide victims or their families with an effective remedy where there had been a violation, including adequate compensation.¹⁷²

72. CRC recommended that a discretionary exemption from the “terrorist activity” bar be instituted to allow the favourable consideration of applications for asylum of former child soldiers, or refugee protection for them.¹⁷³
