Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-fifth session from 2 to 13 May 2016. The review of the Sudan was held at the 5th meeting on 4 May 2016. The Sudanese delegation was headed by the Minister of Justice, Awad Elhassan Elnour Khalifa. At its 14th meeting, held on 10 May 2016, the Working Group adopted the report on the Sudan.
2. On 12 January 2016, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the Sudan: Albania, Indonesia and Togo.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the Sudan:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/SDN/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/SDN/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/25/SDN/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to the Sudan through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Sudan commended the universal periodic review mechanism for its active role in the promotion and protection of human rights and in upholding the values of cooperation, impartiality, transparency and non-politicization. It renewed its commitment to cooperate with all human rights mechanisms. It strove vigorously to promote and protect the human rights enshrined in the constitutional Bill of Rights and safeguarded by national constitutional and legal institutions by implementing policies and programmes, despite the great obstacles and challenges it faced, particularly the unilateral coercive measures imposed since 1997 and armed conflicts since 1955.
6. To prepare the national report, the Sudan established a supervisory committee chaired by the Vice-President of the Sudan. Broad public consultations and dialogue had been conducted since 2011 with all stakeholders, including over 24 non-governmental organizations (NGOs) (70 were directly invited), and 15 workshops were organized at the national and state levels.
7. The Sudan presented a midterm report. It received 160 recommendations: 61 have been implemented and 78 were under implementation.
8. The Sudan referred to its cooperation with the United Nations, the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) and human rights mechanisms. Over the past four years, it had received over seven visits by the Independent Expert on the situation of human rights in the Sudan, in addition to visits by several thematic Special Rapporteurs and Representatives of the Secretary-General. It also continued to cooperate in implementing its commitments and recommendations received during the first review.

9. To contribute to the achievement of international and regional peace and security, the Sudan implemented the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, despite the loss of one third of its area following the secession of South Sudan and one fourth of its human and economic resources. The separation of South Sudan created new facts in the human rights area. Peacemaking through dialogue and negotiation was a top priority. The inclusive National Dialogue currently taking place was one of the prominent political and social developments in the country. Its objectives included establishing constitutional, political and societal reconstruction, cooperation and solidarity among citizens to overcome crises; concurrence on a Constitution and legislation that guaranteed freedoms, rights and social justice; and agreement on independent mechanisms for the protection of such rights.

10. About 83 political parties participated in the Dialogue, including a number of armed rebel groups, after the provision of required guarantees and a positive atmosphere conducive for dialogue. The Dialogue was about to conclude and present its outcome.

11. The April 2015 general elections were free and transparent with free public suffrage, supervised by about 259 international and 23,000 national monitors. Over 40 political parties participated in running the elections, representing all political and societal spectra. Nineteen parties won seats in Parliament, with most of the incumbents having occupied positions in the current Government. The percentage of women holding seats in Parliament increased from 25 to 30 per cent and the actual percentage of female members of Parliament was 35.5 per cent.

12. Following up on the Doha Document for Peace in Darfur, efforts were continuing to build lasting peace in Darfur, in collaboration with United Nations and African Union partners. During the reporting period, several armed groups joined the peace process, notably after the National Dialogue was convened. Efforts were ongoing for the full implementation of the Doha Document, despite non-fulfilment of their commitments.

13. The Darfur Reconstruction and Development Fund and the Voluntary Repatriation and Resettlement Commission were established. Over 600,000 displaced families were accommodated in 291 villages. A joint action plan was drawn up, involving $1.03 billion for 349 projects covering 11 humanitarian and services sectors. Agreements with the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Organization for Migration were also concluded for the implementation of various humanitarian projects in Darfur and other conflict-affected areas, amounting to over $13 million.

14. The Office of the Prosecutor of the Special Court for Darfur Crimes has been provided with legal staff and technical and logistic facilities. Every locality throughout Darfur has a public prosecution office, for a total of 120 such offices, in addition to branches of the Office of the Prosecutor in the region. About 76 criminal cases were reported to the Office during 2015, including charges for murder, crimes against humanity and armed robbery. The situation in most parts of Darfur has been considerably stable. In April 2016, a referendum on the administrative status of Darfur was conducted in compliance with the Doha Document in 1,240 voting centres. Over three million voters participated, representing 90 per cent of registered voters, and 96 international and 1,552 national monitors attended.

15. The constitution drafting process with a view to the adoption of a permanent constitution has started with participation of all stakeholders, including political powers, civil society organizations, academic institutions and various sectors of society. All assistance and support in this respect was welcome to encourage more dialogue at the grass-roots level. The national dialogue process disclosed a strong collective desire towards keeping the current constitutional Bill of Rights, but with more improvements.

16. The Sudan was working on implementing recommendations concerning accession to international and regional human rights instruments. It acceded to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, in 2014, and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (Palermo Protocol), in 2013. Studies on the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa (Maputo Protocol) have been completed and the ratification of the two instruments has been initiated within the legislative process. Different societal views surround the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, therefore the State decided to allow for more dialogue among community components, noting that existing legal and institutional frameworks ensured adequate protection and empowerment for women.

17. A legal reform process was initiated in 2011 and 52 new laws have been promulgated further promoting human rights, including the following: Human Trafficking Act 2014, Right to Information Act 2015, Educational Professions Act 2014, Asylum Act 2014, Mining and Mineral Wealth Act 2015, Elections (Amendment) Act 2014, Transparency, Integrity and Anti-Corruption Act 2016, Health Insurance Act 2016, Ombudsman Act 2015 and Criminal (Amendment) Act 2015.

18. The following were under review by competent committees constituted by the Minister of Justice: Press and Publications Act 2009, National Security Act 2010, Criminal Act 1991, Criminal Procedures Act 1991, Evidence Act 1993, Civil Procedure Act 1983 and draft Social Control (Khartoum State) Act 2011. About 60 other laws have been listed for review within the framework of the legal reform programme. Bills on prevention of racial discrimination, compatible with the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, and on eradication of female genital mutilation have been prepared and were scheduled for the legislative process.

19. The members of the National Human Rights Commission were appointed in 2012 and its executive structure and an independent budget have been adopted. The law establishing the Commission was under review for further reform. Other institutions have been developed or revitalized, including the Judicial and Legal Sciences Institute, the Ombudsman, the National Committee for Combating Money Laundering and Financing of Terrorism, the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking and the High-level Coordinating Mechanism for the Implementation of the Action Plan for the Protection of Children in Armed Conflict, signed by the Government and the United Nations.

20. The Regional Ministerial Conference on Human Trafficking and Smuggling in the Horn of Africa was held in Khartoum in October 2014. The declaration of the Khartoum process initiated at that conference was subsequently adopted in Rome in November 2014.

21. The second phase (2012-2017) of the implementation of the National Strategy (2007-2031) and the National Plan for the Protection and Promotion of Human Rights (2013-2023) was progressing as planned, with an assessment and a review.

22. Some challenges hindering the full enjoyment and implementation of human rights had been encountered, despite efforts made to overcome them. The main challenge was the unilateral coercive measures imposed since 1997, which have resulted in losses amounting to $1,500 billion. The measures have had devastating effects on the enjoyment of human rights, particularly by vulnerable groups. The rights to health, education, water and sanitation, food, transport and other rights have been seriously impaired.

23. Foreign debt has exacerbated poverty and adversely affected human rights. Although the Sudan has fulfilled all the conditions and qualified for exemption under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, unfair political considerations have delayed the exemption decision.

24. Armed conflicts supported by some members of the international community have created another major challenge. The Government was striving for peace through negotiations. The fully implemented Doha Document for Peace in Darfur, the Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement and the Roadmap signed with the African Union High-level Panel on Darfur are indicative of such efforts, but have been refused by the rebels.

25. The Sudan agreed to facilitate access to humanitarian aid by affected persons in accordance with a tripartite agreement between the Government, the United Nations and the League of Arab States, but that was rejected by the armed groups. It called on some States that were hosting armed groups to urge them to join the peace and dialogue process.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

26. During the interactive dialogue, 102 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

27. Spain highlighted the reform of article 149 of the Penal Code, which must be put into practice, and was concerned about the immunities that the security forces enjoyed.

28. Sri Lanka noted the efforts at the institutional and legislative levels to ensure the protection of human rights, including the National Human Rights Commission and the National Action Plan on Human Rights.

29. The State of Palestine welcomed the efforts to promote and protect human rights, despite the difficulties, through the ratification of human rights instruments and education-related measures.

30. Sweden noted the challenges relating to access to justice for women who continued to be subjected to sexual and gender-based violence, particularly in conflict areas.

31. Italy welcomed the measures to combat trafficking in persons and the establishment of committees to study the possibility of acceding to international treaties.

32. Tajikistan welcomed the adoption of the National Action Plan on Human Rights, the legislative improvements and the efforts to conserve cultural heritage.

33. Thailand encouraged the strengthening of the education plan and urged cooperation with the international community to enhance access to humanitarian assistance for internally displaced persons.

37. Uganda noted the legislative achievements, including the Human Trafficking Act, as well as the challenges faced, including foreign debt and armed conflict.

38. Ukraine acknowledged the constitutional and legislative developments, but was concerned about the verification magnitude of displacement in central Darfur and the delivery of humanitarian aid.
39. The United Arab Emirates appreciated the adoption of legal measures and strategies to protect human rights and requested clarification about the nature of the guarantees of the anti-trafficking law.
40. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland remained concerned by violations in the Blue Nile, South Kordofan and Darfur, the response to armed opposition groups in Jebel Marra and the powers of the National Intelligence and Security Service.
41. The United States of America noted ongoing violations and abuses of human rights and humanitarian law in Darfur, Blue Nile and South Kordofan, including attacks on civilian areas.
42. Uruguay welcomed the measures taken with regard to economic, social and cultural rights and encouraged the redoubling of efforts.
43. Yemen appreciated the adoption of a national legal framework and, among others, the National Action Plan on Human Rights.
44. Zimbabwe welcomed the Human Trafficking Act, the National Human Rights Commission and the National Action Plan on Human Rights.
45. Albania commended the progress made in adopting the Human Trafficking Act and the Act establishing the Educational Professions Council.
46. Algeria welcomed the legal human rights framework, in particular the National Strategy (2007-2031) and the National Action Plan on Human Rights.
47. The Sudan stated that, although the budget for education has been increased, the school dropout rate has not decreased owing to the economic situation in the country. Seventy per cent of the nomadic population were enrolled in schools, an increase from 33 per cent. The budget for the health sector increased from 4 to 9 per cent of the gross domestic product in 2015 and child and maternal mortality decreased.
48. The Sudan reaffirmed that capital punishment against children under 18 years was prohibited by law.
49. A bill on female genital mutilation was introduced in Parliament in 2016 and programmes against female genital mutilation, such as the Salima campaign, continued.
50. Angola welcomed the Human Trafficking Act, the Penal Law and the Election Law.
51. Argentina echoed the concern regarding the difficulties faced by the Sudan as expressed in Human Rights Council resolutions and acknowledged the efforts regarding internally displaced persons.
52. Australia was gravely concerned at violations of human rights in conflict zones and condemned the impunity allowed to perpetrators and the violence against civilians.
53. Austria encouraged the swift implementation of the Action Plan to prevent the recruitment and use of children by government forces and was concerned by violations of humanitarian and human rights law in conflict areas.
54. Azerbaijan noted as positive the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission, the National Action Plan on Human Rights and the accession to the Palermo Protocol.
55. Bahrain welcomed the acceptance of the majority of the recommendations from the previous cycle and the measures taken to implement them, despite existing difficulties.

56. Bangladesh praised the adoption of the National Action Plan on Human Rights and the actions to ensure the rights of women. It noted the challenges faced, including foreign debt, sanctions and armed conflict.
57. Belarus welcomed the efforts to eradicate poverty through the creation of social funds and the granting of microcredit and noted the measures taken to strengthen the fight against human trafficking.
58. Belgium welcomed the adoption of the law on transparency, integrity and combating corruption. It encouraged further efforts to protect women rights and expressed concern about reports of intimidation and harassment of human rights defenders.
59. Botswana welcomed the measures taken to protect the rights of women and children. It was concerned at the lack of accountability for crimes committed during the conflict.
60. Brazil welcomed the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the India-Brazil-South Africa initiative.
61. Burkina Faso commended the efforts to improve the human rights situation, despite a difficult national political and socioeconomic situation.
62. Burundi commended the legislative and institutional measures taken and the efforts to promote and protect human rights in the health sector, by adopting a five-year strategic plan.
63. Canada was concerned at reports that government forces and affiliated militias were implicated in sexual violence.
64. The Central African Republic welcomed the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission, the Advisory Council for Human Rights and the Human Rights Committee of the National Assembly and urged an end to impunity.
65. Chad commended the granting of equal rights to women in many spheres of life and the cooperation with international human rights mechanisms and special procedure mandate holders.
66. Chile welcomed the delegation and the presentation of the report and made recommendations.
67. China welcomed the efforts in the areas of trafficking in persons, health, education and anti-corruption and legislative measures and reforms to protect vulnerable groups.

71. Cuba noted the political willingness to implement the recommendations of the review, while noting the challenges faced, such as armed conflict and foreign debt.
72. Cyprus welcomed the Human Trafficking Act and the creation of the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking.
73. The Czech Republic welcomed the delegation and the informative presentations and made recommendations.

74. Denmark welcomed the National Human Rights Commission and urged the Sudan to ensure its independence. It noted the need for dialogue among all parties in conflict and the discrimination against women.
75. Egypt welcomed the establishment of the national commission to follow up the recommendations of the universal periodic review and the adoption of human rights-sensitive laws.
76. El Salvador noted the efforts to implement the recommendations of the review and the persistence of challenges.
77. Equatorial Guinea congratulated the Sudan on its legislative measures and the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission.
78. Ethiopia welcomed the legislative measures and noted the commitment to establishing the National Action Plan on Human Rights.
79. France welcomed the delegation and made recommendations.
80. Georgia urged the introduction of amendments to the national legislation to ensure the protection of human rights, including the rights of vulnerable groups and the issuing of a standing invitation to special procedure mandate holders.
81. Germany was concerned that the participation of civil society was obstructed during the pre-session period of the review and that the first cycle recommendations had not been implemented. It commended the concessions made during the peace negotiations.
82. On the issue of immunities for members of the security services, the Sudan explained that those immunities were procedural, not legal, measures, which could be lifted if a person was accused of a criminal offence. This has been proven by the courts, which have handed down decisions in many cases.
83. Concerning internally displaced persons, 90 per cent of the area was accessible for humanitarian aid, the remaining 10 per cent was hindered by the security situation resulting from ongoing fighting. Over 60 foreign organizations worked in Darfur implementing 168 projects at a cost of $160 million. The Government continued engagement with humanitarian work partners to provide aid and services to internally displaced persons in camps and settlements in Darfur, South Kordofan and Blue Nile.
84. On women's rights and equality, the delegation reaffirmed that the Constitution did not allow for any form of discrimination. Women received equal pay and had equal rights to own property and equal access to education and health.
85. The Sudan emphasized that a zero-tolerance policy on violence against women had been adopted, containing several pillars on, inter alia, establishing institutions charged with coordinating efforts to combating violence against women, facilitating access to justice, appointing female police staff, establishing specialized prosecution offices and launching social outreach campaigns. Concerning allegations of mass rape, the authorities have provided accessible modalities for the protection of women and such allegations have been investigated accordingly by female police officers. Legal aid and psychosocial support have also been provided.
86. Ghana welcomed the legislative measures taken. It noted, however, that a number of core international human rights instruments had not been ratified.
87. Greece welcomed the initiatives to establish various institutions. It expressed concern for human rights violations by the State and armed groups and the restrictions imposed on human rights.

88. Honduras commended the progress made to strengthen institutional infrastructure, including the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission.
89. Iceland, while noting progress made, remained concerned about the overall human rights situation and was alarmed that rape continued to be used as a weapon of war and at the practice of female genital mutilation.
90. India welcomed the legislative and institutional measures to protect human rights and appreciated the measures to protect the rights of women and girls. It encouraged ending the recruitment of children in armed conflict.
91. Indonesia welcomed the establishment of the National Action Plan on Human Rights, the National Human Rights Commission and the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking.
92. Iraq welcomed the adoption of human rights-related laws, in particular with regard to trafficking in persons and corruption.
93. Ireland was concerned about the application of the death penalty, sexual violence against women in conflict areas and restrictions to the rights of human rights defenders in connection with the present review.
94. Switzerland welcomed the Action Plan signed with the United Nations to protect children in armed conflict and expressed concern about the violations of human rights and of international humanitarian law committed by security forces and about persisting impunity.
95. Japan welcomed the progress of the National Dialogue and expressed concern at the denial of humanitarian access in certain areas, restricted political freedom and freedom of expression, arbitrary arrests, executions and torture.
96. Kenya acknowledged the efforts to implement recommendations accepted in 2011 and enquired about measures to maintain equality among religious groups.
97. Kuwait welcomed the human rights legal framework developed since the previous review, including the law against trafficking in persons and electoral laws.
98. Latvia expressed alarm about the situation of women and concern about media restrictions and censorship and the alleged intimidation, harassment and arrest of journalists and civil society activists.
99. Lebanon noted, despite the challenges, the development of a human rights legal framework, including the law against trafficking in persons and electoral and anti-corruption laws.
100. Libya welcomed the positive legal developments with the adoption of the law against trafficking and the anti-corruption law.
101. Liechtenstein expressed concern at the widespread impunity for human rights violations in Darfur. It regretted the continued non-cooperation with the International Criminal Court.
102. Lithuania encouraged the effective implementation of the National Action Plan to end and prevent the recruitment of children in the armed forces.
103. Luxembourg thanked the delegation for the presentation of its report and made recommendations.
104. Madagascar welcomed the adoption of human rights measures such as the anti-trafficking law and the establishment of the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking.

105. Malaysia commended the progress made and called for additional attention to the promotion and protection of the rights of women, children and internally displaced persons.
106. Maldives expressed concern about the growing communities of internally displaced persons, owing to armed conflict, communal violence and conflict over resources.
107. Mali welcomed the adoption of laws on freedom of information, the teaching profession council, asylum and health insurance.
108. Mexico recognized the strategy for work and economic empowerment of persons with disabilities. It invited the Sudan to ensure the right of its population to education, regardless of gender.
109. Montenegro expressed concern about sexual violence in conflict areas and enquired about measures to investigate allegations of mass rape, punish perpetrators and provide humanitarian access to civilian populations.
110. Morocco valued the efforts to develop the institutional and legislative framework with the National Human Rights Commission, the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking, the National Action Plan on Human Rights, the anti-trafficking law and the strengthening of mechanisms to protect vulnerable groups and of the judicial system.
111. Myanmar noted the adoption of new laws, including the Human Trafficking Act, the creation of the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking and the adoption of the National Action Plan on Human Rights.
112. Namibia noted the legislative developments and efforts to promote social and economic rights relating to food, housing, water and sanitation and education.
113. The Netherlands expressed concern about the prevention by the Government of civil society representatives from travelling to Geneva to share their views with the international community during the present review.
114. New Zealand expressed concern about the conflicts in South Kordofan, Blue Nile and Darfur and called for an immediate end to attacks against civilians. It welcomed the signing of the Roadmap agreement and urged its full implementation.
115. The Niger noted the adoption of the National Action Plan on Human Rights to strengthen human rights foundations in law and in practice.
116. Nigeria noted the engagement with stakeholders in the preparation of the national report and the commitment to the principles of the United Nations.
117. Norway commended the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the efforts to reduce child marriages.
118. Oman commended the efforts to empower women and enhance their participation in decision-making processes and the adoption of the National Action Plan on Human Rights, aimed at, inter-alia, building partnerships with civil society organizations.
119. Pakistan welcomed the efforts to promote human rights, including in the areas of protecting victims of trafficking, women and children.
120. The Philippines urged that steps be taken to address concerns in the areas of health care, water, education, food, transport and development. It called on the international community to assist with action to address climate change.
121. Poland noted the efforts to comply with the recommendations of the review and encouraged the effective implementation of the National Action Plan on Human Rights.

122. Portugal expressed concern about the human rights situation and noted the cases of arbitrary arrest and detention, ill-treatment of human rights defenders and that the death penalty was used for crimes not considered serious under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

123. The Republic of Korea stated that national integrity and long-term stability could only be achieved through reconciliation and confidence-building and that sexual violence in conflict areas must be investigated.

124. Saudi Arabia noted the political and economic challenges and commended the efforts to combat human trafficking by creating the National Committee and adopting the law on human trafficking and the development of plans and programmes to provide adequate food.

125. Senegal welcomed the ongoing efforts to fulfil the commitments relating to the review and the positive reforms in the areas of health care, education, women's rights and vulnerable groups. It invited the international community to provide support for the adoption of a new Constitution.

126. Sierra Leone encouraged further efforts to eliminate violence against women and ensure the protection of human rights defenders. It expressed concern about the internal armed conflict.

127. Slovakia noted that many of the recommendations from the first review have not been implemented. It expressed concern that the interim Constitution and national framework did not fully recognize civil and political rights and about restrictions on human rights defenders.

128. Slovenia noted that civil society representatives were prevented from attending the present review. It expressed concern about human rights abuses by all parties to the conflict and the denial of humanitarian access for the civil population.

129. South Africa welcomed the legislative developments, the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the Salima campaign to prevent female genital mutilation.

130. Guatemala was concerned about violence against women and reports on the lack of investigation of related crimes.

131. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela noted the effect of the unilateral coercive measures on the standard of living and the achievements regarding the right to education, including measures to improve access in remote areas.

132. Viet Nam noted the adoption of the new Constitution, several new laws and the National Action Plan on Human Rights.

133. Mauritania acknowledged the adoption of several laws, including the Human Trafficking Act, the Asylum Act and the Freedom of Information Act. It valued the pledge to pursue and reinforce human rights cooperation and communications with all national, regional and international partners.

134. Qatar noted the measures to implement the recommendations of the review and commended the efforts to achieve peace and stability in all parts of the Sudan by adopting the National Dialogue approach as a basis for achieving political consensus.

135. The delegation underlined that the Sudan was not a party to the International Criminal Court and was not bound by its decisions; whereas, it was bound by African Union resolutions in that respect.

136. The Sudan rarely strove to address human trafficking in collaboration with international and regional partners, although the refugee influx and lack of natural barriers outweighed State capabilities. It received about 1,000-1,200 asylum seekers monthly and 97 per cent were granted asylum. It was bound by the principle of non-refoulement.

137. In conclusion, the head of the delegation reconfirmed the commitment and full respect for international standards of human rights and its commitment to cooperation with international mechanisms. He called on the international community for support in the reform process and human rights development and promotion.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
