Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-seventh session from 1 to 12 May 2017. The review of the Netherlands was held at the 15th meeting, on 10 May 2017. The delegation of the Netherlands was headed by the Minister of the Interior and Kingdom Relations, Ronald Plasterk. At its 18th meeting, held on 12 May 2017, the Working Group adopted the report on the Netherlands.
2. On 13 February 2017, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the Netherlands: Egypt, Georgia and United States of America.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the Netherlands:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/NLD/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/NLD/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/NLD/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Germany, Mexico, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to the Netherlands through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The representatives of all four countries of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, namely the Netherlands, Aruba, Sint Maarten and Curaçao, participated in the interactive dialogue on behalf of their governments, as each country is responsible for implementing its obligations stemming from the human rights conventions to which the Netherlands is a party.
6. The head of the delegation reported on the human rights situation in the Netherlands. He said that the Constitution, laws and policies provided strong protection for human rights. The Council of State, the Netherlands Institute for Human Rights, the National Ombudsman and the Children's Ombudsman had played an important and effective role in protecting human rights by providing legal advice and monitoring compliance with human rights obligations by national and local authorities. The Netherlands Institute for Human Rights had been awarded A status in 2014. Additionally, institutions such as the Data Protection Authority and the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Human Beings and Sexual Violence against Children had monitored the protection of specific human rights.
7. The Government had submitted a bill to the parliament proposing to modernize article 13 of the Constitution on protecting the confidentiality of communications. The bill extended the scope of communications from letters, telegraphs and telephone calls to all forms of communication, including electronic communications.
8. Several policy measures had been taken during the reporting period. The National Action Plan on Human Rights had been adopted in 2013 in line with the recommendations put forward by Argentina, Brazil, the Philippines and Uzbekistan during the 2012 review of the Netherlands. In the framework of the National Action Programme against Discrimination, a nationwide anti-discrimination campaign had been launched and it was foreseen that the local anti-discrimination bureaus would be strengthened.

9. An action plan against discrimination in the labour market that included measures against discrimination on all grounds had been launched. Moreover, the police had launched a three-year programme entitled “The power of difference” to prevent ethnic profiling and focus, inter alia, on education and training and on an improved complaints procedure.

10. Gender equality remained a priority for the Government. Several projects had been launched to increase awareness about the importance of the economic independence of women. Although approximately one in three top positions in the central government were held by women, the Government would continue its efforts to further improve gender equality in line with the recommendations contained in the concluding observations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

11. In response to the advance questions regarding the rights of refugees, the delegation stated that the Netherlands had dealt with an influx of asylum seekers in 2015. The Government’s highest priority was ensuring that all those concerned could be accommodated in a humane fashion. The Netherlands had made great efforts to achieve that objective and not a single asylum seeker had been left without shelter during the reporting period.

12. The delegation reiterated the strong commitment of the Netherlands to the universal periodic review process; it noted the voluntarily submission of a midterm report and its constructive contribution to the sessions of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review. The Netherlands would take the recommendations put forward during its third review very seriously, as the success of the review exercise depended on the implementation of the recommendations.

13. The representative of Aruba highlighted that the diversity of the population of Aruba was a result of migration flows from various countries. The government had been working hard to achieve its vision of sustainability and shared prosperity and had been implementing strategies to improve the lives of its citizens, promote cultural diversity and reinforce peaceful coexistence.

14. With the support of the United Nations Development Programme, the Centre of Excellence for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States had been established in Aruba in 2015, building on local experience with sustainable development practices. The Centre aimed at strengthening innovation and resilience in small island developing States and at offering a platform to exchange knowledge and experiences between developing countries related to such issues as renewable energy, water management, tourism and public health.

15. The representative of Aruba spoke of several measures that had been taken to reform legislation in line with international human rights standards. The 2012 Penal Code had strengthened protection against discrimination in Aruba. The 2016 amendments to the Civil Code had provided legal recognition of civil unions between same-sex persons. Legal amendments had prohibited corporal punishment within the family. Sentences for offences related to human trafficking had been increased. A new project had started in 2017 to provide residence permits to undocumented youths. The government of Aruba recognized that the protection of human rights required continuous progress.

16. The representative of Sint Maarten stated that the government remained committed to the protection and promotion of human rights and had made several efforts to implement its human rights obligations. Since the 2012 review, the government had taken measures to ensure that all children between 4 and 18 years of age had access to education regardless of their legal status. Additional schools had been established and the teacher-student ratio had improved.

17. In 2015, Sint Maarten had adopted a new Penal Code to address new challenges and meet its international obligations. The Code included stronger provisions for effectively prosecuting perpetrators of human trafficking-related crimes, in line with the recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Human Rights Committee. Sint Maarten had obtained a tier 1 score in the 2017 Trafficking in Persons Report of the United States Department of State. As improving conditions in penitentiary facilities remained a priority, the Ministry of Justice had drafted a policy paper to implement an action plan for that purpose.

18. The representative of Curaçao informed the Human Rights Council that the government had held broad consultations with various governmental and non-governmental organizations to prepare for the review. A follow-up meeting on the outcome of the review was scheduled to be held in June.

19. In addition, sessions had been organized to raise awareness of and assess government compliance with international human rights treaties. Domestic violence, discrimination based on gender, race, gender identity and sexual orientation and the establishment of a national human rights institution were some of the issues that had been discussed during those sessions and the decision to establish a human rights institution for Curaçao had been one of the outcomes.

20. The government of Curaçao gave high importance to issues of youth. An action programme for youth development had been adopted. The Youth Council of Curaçao, which had been established in 2017, had started to work with the Kingdom Youth Parliament to ensure that the voices and interests of young people were taken into consideration. The government had taken measures to provide free primary and secondary education for children living in poverty, prevent children from dropping out of school and assist youths in gaining access to employment. The government had been working on establishing an ombudsman for children.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

21. During the interactive dialogue, 89 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

62. Guatemala expressed concern about the rise in hate speech in the media and the Internet and among politicians.
63. In response to questions regarding domestic violence, the head of delegation stated that the police had set up specialized front offices to address effectively cases of child abuse. The police and the prosecutor's office had been implementing special programmes to effectively address domestic violence, including child abuse.

64. Three municipalities in the Caribbean part of the Netherlands had made progress in terms of access to health care and to quality primary education. In order to address the remaining challenges, the Government had focused its efforts on poverty reduction, economic development, the advancement of the rights of children and good governance.

65. Regarding questions on the use of ethnic profiling by law enforcement officers, the delegation stated that such profiling was prohibited by law. The police had adopted a code of conduct setting out professional standards and guidelines for law enforcement officers. Persons who had been subjected to ethnic profiling could use a mobile telephone application to make notifications and complaints and to record information on police stops.

66. The Government strongly condemned hate crimes and hate speech. It had launched a broad anti-discrimination campaign that included the issue of hate speech and it had established hotline services to address hate speech on the Internet, including by removing online expressions of hate speech. In response to questions regarding freedom of assembly, the delegation stated that the Public Assemblies Act provided adequate regulations for local authorities to ensure the right to freedom of assembly, as was shown in a recent evaluation.

67. The delegation informed the Human Rights Council that the Government did not intend to withdraw its reservations to the Convention on the Rights of the Child owing to the peculiarities of its legal system. Nor would the Government sign the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, as the Convention did not differentiate between the rights of migrants in a legal or illegal situation.

68. The delegation stated that the police were trained to recognize both physical and psychological violence against women. It highlighted the joint efforts of the police, the prosecutor's office and non-governmental organizations in providing legal assistance and psychological support to victims of domestic violence. Regarding questions on the detention of migrants, the delegation indicated that alternatives to detention were widely used and available to migrants.

69. The representative of Aruba stated that the government had established a counter-trafficking task force that had drafted a new national action plan against trafficking for 2015-2019, had formalized standard operating procedures to guide front-line responders in the effective identification of trafficking victims and their referral for care, and established a counter-trafficking coordination centre. 121. The representative of Aruba informed the Human Rights Council that the government had taken steps to draft a national human rights action plan to be completed in 2017. An initial survey had been carried out to establish the priorities. As the establishment of a national human rights institution and the appointment of an ombudsman and a children's ombudsman remained a priority, the government had been studying the experience of the Netherlands Institute for Human Rights and had been consulting with various stakeholders.

122. The representative of Aruba stated that the government had adopted a national youth policy and had been developing an action plan for 2017-2019 to implement that policy. A special commission had been created to develop a gender policy in consultation with stakeholders.

123. The representative of Sint Maarten stated that three ministries had been jointly involved in ensuring the realization of the rights of children by developing necessary policies, implementing programmes and providing support to families for the healthy development of children. Various institutions had been tasked with addressing cases of child abuse.

124. The government of Sint Maarten remained committed to protecting the rights of detainees. The first youth care and rehabilitation centre had been established in 2014 and accommodated children in conflict with law. Its main objective was to reintegrate those children into society.

125. The representative of Curaçao stated that harmonizing efforts to realize human rights throughout the Kingdom remained a challenge. The sharing of experiences and knowledge was considered to be important for achieving the harmonization of human rights standards in the Kingdom.

126. The delegation stated that the Government had evaluated the implementation of its national human rights action plan and that the Netherlands Institute for Human Rights had commissioned an independent evaluation of the action plan's implementation.

127. The Government had set targets to ensure access by persons with the disabilities to the labour market. It had also implemented measures, including public campaigns against discrimination in the labour market, to decrease the pay gap between women and men. A new action plan has been developed to combat discrimination against pregnant women in employment. The Netherlands had drafted an action plan for the period 2016-2018 to prevent and combat child sex tourism.

128. The delegation informed the Human Rights Council that the Government had taken measures to ensure that sexuality education was taught in secondary school. The law prohibited discrimination against transgender and intersex persons.

129. In 2016, the Netherlands had launched proceedings for the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

130. In conclusion, the delegation, on behalf of the Kingdom, expressed its gratitude to all States Members of the United Nations for their active participation in and contribution to the interactive dialogue led by the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review. The areas identified would help the Government to further improve human rights protection. The Government would seriously consider all recommendations put forward during the review and express its position on them before the thirty-sixth session of the Human Rights Council.
