Japanese Liaison Council of Second-Generation Atomic Bomb Survivors (JLCSGABS)

On December 21st, 1988, the Japanese Liaison Council of Second-Generation Atomic Bomb Survivors made up of groups was formed in Japan by the surviving second-generation explosion victims themselves who live in Japan. One of its purposes is to unite their voices in their appeal for government support to them, as part of their human rights. Another important purpose is to call for nuclear free world so that no one becomes a nuclear victim again. At present, the Council is joined by 19 groups of second-generation A-bomb survivors in Japan.
