ARTICLE 19: Global Campaign for Free Expression (ARTICLE 19) (established 1987, in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council since 1991) is an independent human rights organisation that works around the world to protect and promote the right to freedom of expression and the right to freedom of information. It takes its name from Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. ARTICLE 19 monitors threats to freedom of expression in different regions of the world, as well as national and global trends, and develops long-term strategies to address them, and advocates for the implementation of the highest standards of freedom of expression, nationally and globally. ARTICLE 19 has a regional office for East Africa based in Kenya, and is actively engaged in promoting and protecting freedom of expression and information in the region.

The East and Horn of Africa Human Rights Defenders Project (DefendDefenders) was established in 2005. It seeks to strengthen the work of human rights defenders (HRDs) throughout the region by reducing their vulnerability to the risk of persecution and by enhancing their capacity to effectively defend human rights. DefendDefenders focuses its work on Burundi, Djibouti, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Rwanda, Somalia (together with Somaliland), South Sudan, Sudan, Tanzania and Uganda.

Many countries in this sub-region have experienced massive human rights abuses, long-term and large-scale impunity, single-party and military dictatorships, civil wars, and in the case of Somalia, a collapsed state; such situations and contexts render both the work and lives of human rights defenders particularly challenging.
