* The annex is being circulated without formal editing, in the languages of submission only.

Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-ninth session from 15 to 26 January 2018. The review of France was held at the 1st meeting, on 15 January 2018. The delegation of France was headed by François Croquette, the Ambassador for Human Rights, Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs. At its 10th meeting, held on 19 January 2018, the Working Group adopted the report on France.
2. On 10 January 2018, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of France: Brazil, Kenya and Kyrgyzstan.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of France:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/FRA/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/FRA/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/FRA/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Germany, Portugal, Rwanda, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to France through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of France recalled that respect for human rights was a core value of the French Republic. France had continually advocated for the creation of the universal periodic review mechanism. Since the previous review of France in 2013, great efforts had been made to enhance the protection of fundamental rights.
6. France had endeavoured to foster greater respect for the rights of women, particularly in the area of violence against women, [through such initiatives as the development of the Plan to Combat Violence 2017–2019 and the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention)]. It had also made efforts to promote gender equality in the workplace through such initiatives as the creation of the High Council for Gender Equality and the adoption of the law of 4 August 2014 on genuine equality between men and women.
7. Combating discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity was also a priority, as evidenced by the legalization of same-sex marriage and the development of the 2017–2020 plan for putting an end to hatred and discrimination directed at lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons.
8. France had given new impetus to its efforts to combat racism, xenophobia and anti-Semitism, which had been declared the national priority issue for 2015. In all, 40 concrete measures had been taken within the framework of the second National Action Plan to Combat Racism and Anti-Semitism, which covered the period from 2015 to 2017. France had pursued a proactive policy on fighting crime and had adopted specific pieces of legislation to combat online hate speech. Police officers, gendarmes, judges and senior registrars were provided with regular training on the subject.

9. France had stepped up its efforts to put an end to the use of racial profiling, which ran counter to the Republican principle of equality and was banned under the Code of Ethics governing the National Police and the Gendarmerie. An effective remedy was available to individuals who considered that they had been subjected to racial profiling. The Court of Cassation had recalled that identity checks carried out based on physical characteristics associated with actual or presumed ethnic origin were discriminatory, and the use of that practice would constitute serious misconduct on the part of the State.

10. France had stepped up its efforts to combat discrimination in the sphere of education. The topic was a key element in the new syllabuses for ethics and civic education courses. France was determined to mitigate the impact of social and economic inequalities on academic success by implementing social diversity policies in approximately 40 districts and priority education policies in the most challenging neighbourhoods. Tackling discrimination in the workplace remained a priority for the authorities.

11. France had also made efforts to promote solidarity. The multi-year poverty reduction and social inclusion plan for 2013 had made it possible to integrate the needs of the most vulnerable members of the population into the design of policies on access to employment, health care, education, housing and support for families. The rise in poverty rates in France had been halted, and particular progress had been made in the area of emergency accommodation, with 30,000 additional places created since 2012. With regard to the issue posed by unauthorized camps and slum clearance or reclamation, France had made efforts to optimize effective access to housing, health care, employment and schooling: close to 9,000 people had secured housing or temporary accommodations, more than 1,700 people had found employment and almost 5,800 children had been enrolled in school between 2012 and 2016. The Planning Act, which was designed to achieve genuine equality for overseas collectivities, had facilitated the adjustment of legislation to take account of the specific needs existing in those locations.

12. In 2017, France had passed legislation on the duty of care held by parent and subcontracting companies in an effort to ensure that transnational enterprises are held accountable for their actions. France had adopted a national action plan for the implementation of the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights in April 2017 and ratified the Protocol to the International Labour Organization Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29), on 7 June 2016.

13. France was working to cope with the global phenomenon of large-scale population shifts. Two major pieces of legislation had been passed since 2013. The Asylum Reform Act had established the independence of the French Office for the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons, strengthened the rights of asylum seekers, improved efficiency and reduced processing times. The Act on the Rights of Foreigners in France had strengthened the right to residence, buttressed judicial authority to exercise oversight of placement in custody and established the principle of prioritizing alternatives to detention. The Government was committed to further improving reception conditions for asylum seekers. The number of places in accommodations for asylum seekers and refugees had doubled since 2013 and was continuing to rise. The time frame for processing asylum requests needed to be shortened and the integration of refugees needed to be improved. Lastly, France had established a mechanism for the protection of unaccompanied minors present in its territory, irrespective of their nationality or legal status.

14. France was working to block illegal immigration channels and to stop human trafficking networks from exploiting people for the purposes of prostitution, forced begging or criminal activity and to put an end to degrading forms of work. Since 2013, France had strengthened its policy for combating human trafficking and established its first national action plan in that regard.

15. In order to address the problem of prison overcrowding, France had modified its prison policies since 2013 to promote the use of alternatives to imprisonment and the adjustment of sentences. A construction programme had been announced that would lead to the creation of 15,000 additional prison places and the renovation of existing facilities.

16. France had a number of suitable institutions and procedures in place to uphold the right to an effective remedy for victims of police violence. Officers suspected of excessive use of force were subject to administrative and judicial investigations.

17. The French authorities continued to display steadfast determination in dealing with the challenges posed by terrorism. The attacks of 13 November 2015 had led the authorities to impose a state of emergency that had then been extended on several occasions in response to the continued threat of terrorism. Although France had invoked the temporary derogation clauses contained in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (European Convention on Human Rights) and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, it had not in any way abandoned the rule of law. The state of emergency could not remain in place indefinitely, and the new Government had decided to lift it on 1 November 2017 with the aim of building an effective framework for protecting and upholding basic rights. A law had been passed to strengthen internal security and combat terrorism for that same purpose.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

18. During the interactive dialogue, 115 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

19. Georgia acknowledged progress achieved in combating discrimination and ensuring the rights of women and children.

20. Germany welcomed the ratification of the Istanbul Convention and the implementation of the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

21. Ghana commended the establishment of the High Council for Equality between Women and Men and of the High Council for Family, Childhood and the Elderly.

22. Greece applauded steps to combat racism, anti-Semitism and violence against children.

23. Guyana recognized the long history of France and its commitment to human rights.

24. Haiti welcomed the leadership of France on environmental protection, and a law to prevent human rights violations in supply chains.

25. Honduras praised the establishment of the High Council for Equality between Women and Men and of the Office of the Ombudsman.

26. Hungary welcomed the growing accessibility of education and health care, expressing concern about discrimination against persons with disabilities.

27. Iceland commended France for promoting the rights of women, children and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.

28. India recognized efforts to combat gender discrimination and to achieve gender parity.

29. Indonesia made recommendations.

30. The Islamic Republic of Iran made recommendations.

31. Iraq welcomed steps to reduce poverty and marginalization, encouraging France to improve respect for freedom of religion.

32. Ireland praised measures to combat racism, anti-Semitism and violence against women.

33. Israel commended the implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Racism and Anti-Semitism.

34. Italy welcomed the ratification of the Istanbul Convention and the establishment of the National Child Protection Council.

35. Japan applauded efforts to combat violence against women and discrimination against Roma.
36. Kazakhstan acknowledged the ratification of international instruments and the adoption of national action plans.
37. The Lao People's Democratic Republic noted efforts to achieve gender equality and to combat gender violence.
38. Lebanon commended the commitment to promoting citizens' and residents' human rights.
39. Libya acknowledged the ratification of international instruments, noting that further efforts were required to combat Islamophobia.
40. Liechtenstein welcomed the prohibition of corporal punishment, noting that it was not banned in all settings.
41. Madagascar commended the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure, regretting that discrimination persisted.
42. Malaysia praised efforts to prevent discrimination, and to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure.
43. Maldives was encouraged by legislative and constitutional measures to ensure gender parity in political and public life.
44. Mali acknowledged the ratification of the Istanbul Convention and the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and praised the leadership of France during the 2015 United Nations Climate Change Conference, held in Paris.
45. Mauritania noted steps to manage migration and fight racial discrimination.
46. Mongolia expressed concern about racial discrimination, and enquired about the right to decent housing for persons with insufficient means.
47. Montenegro commended the adoption of Act No. 2013-404 on marriage for all and of the plan against anti-LGBT hatred and discrimination (2017–2020).
48. Mozambique made recommendations.
49. Myanmar commended the ratification of numerous human rights treaties and efforts to combat terrorism.
50. Namibia applauded France for declaring the fight against racism and anti-Semitism to be a national priority.
51. Nepal praised efforts to ensure gender parity, encouraging France to enhance its official development assistance.
52. The Netherlands commended efforts to achieve gender equality in the workplace, and to improve prison conditions.
53. Norway made recommendations.
54. Pakistan appreciated efforts to combat racism, while expressing regret that religious and racial prejudice remained prevalent.
55. France was committed to fighting terrorism while upholding the rule of law and fundamental freedoms. The measures provided for by the internal security and antiterrorism law of 30 October 2017 were targeted, proportionate and aimed solely at preventing and combating terrorism. Those measures were accompanied by a large number of safeguards and were subject to wide-ranging parliamentary and judicial oversight.
56. The French delegation had explained that the authorities were preparing a new action plan to tackle all forms of human trafficking. The new plan, which was based on the previous one, would have a particular focus on minors.

57. The French delegation had noted that unaccompanied minors were provided with accommodation without any conditions attached and benefited from all the social assistance services and rights accorded to children. When the “Jungle” camp in Calais had been dismantled, the Government had set up a special emergency mechanism for providing accommodation to individuals who declared themselves to be unaccompanied minors.

58. With regard to the rights of migrants, refugees and asylum seekers, the Government was giving the situation in Calais its full attention. The clearing of the Calais camp had put an end to a situation that could not be allowed to continue for reasons of security and the need to uphold human dignity. France intended to develop a balanced policy on asylum and the integration of refugees that would ensure the effective application of the law and favour the integration of persons who had been placed under the protection of France. It was continuing its efforts to improve the various mechanisms for helping foreign nationals to move on from emergency accommodation and find suitable housing.

59. France was committed to tackling racism and anti-Semitism. The next national plan on the issue would be launched by the Prime Minister in March. The plan would be an ambitious one and was currently the focus of a consultation process involving non-governmental organizations and ministries. France was committed to increasing its efforts to combat all forms of hatred expressed on social media.

60. Panama noted steps to ratify international instruments and to combat discrimination.

61. Paraguay welcomed the leadership of France during the 2015 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

62. Peru highlighted achievements concerning gender equality.

63. The Philippines welcomed efforts to combat violence against women and children.

64. Poland commended the creation of the National Child Protection Council and the interministerial plan on mobilizing against and fighting violence against children.

65. Portugal welcomed legislative measures to ensure gender parity in political and public life.

66. Qatar commended efforts to fight human trafficking and hate speech.

67. The Republic of Korea praised steps to integrate Roma and to combat forced labour.

68. The Republic of Moldova welcomed the anti-discrimination framework and achievements in ensuring gender equality.

69. The Russian Federation expressed concern about migrants’ rights in the Pas-de-Calais region, and the increase in xenophobia and racism.

70. Rwanda expressed concern at the minimal steps taken to hold accountable perpetrators of genocide in Rwanda residing in France.

71. Saudi Arabia commended steps to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure, and to combat social marginalization.

72. Senegal welcomed measures protecting migrants’ rights, and combating racism and anti-Semitism.

73. Serbia applauded the adoption of the Act on equality and citizenship, and measures to fight violence against women.

74. Sierra Leone welcomed efforts to combat racism and encouraged France to withdraw its declarations regarding the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

75. Singapore praised efforts to combat racism, anti-Semitism and gender-based violence.

76. Slovakia commended steps to prevent discrimination and to ensure children’s rights and gender equality.

77. Slovenia welcomed the procedure for amending gender in civil status registration and measures against discrimination.
78. South Africa urged France to uphold the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action.
79. Spain congratulated France on ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a communications procedure.
80. Sri Lanka noted actions to combat racial discrimination and in ensuring gender equality.
81. The State of Palestine welcomed efforts to combat discrimination and implement the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.
82. The Sudan expressed concern at racist and xenophobic attacks and crimes against migrants.
83. Sweden acknowledged and encouraged work to fulfil human rights obligations.
84. Switzerland welcomed the lifting of the state of emergency, and efforts to promote trust in law enforcement officials.
85. The Syrian Arab Republic stressed the inadmissibility of forcefully acquiring the territory of other States, and the right of peoples to self-determination.
86. Thailand commended efforts to ensure corporate accountability by implementing the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.
87. Timor-Leste commended France for integrating migrant women and girls into society.
88. Togo welcomed the National Action Plan to Combat Racism and Anti-Semitism 2015–2017.
89. Tunisia commended France for ratifying the Istanbul Convention.
90. Turkey noted that political initiatives contrary to freedom of expression had been censured by the Constitutional Council.
91. Ukraine noted efforts on gender equality, Roma integration and civil society dialogue.
92. The United Kingdom valued the cooperation of France in combating human trafficking.
93. The United States of America expressed concern at the ban on religious attire and at the low level of schooling of Roma children.
94. Uruguay noted achievements relating to gender equality.
95. Uzbekistan acknowledged the establishment of the High Council for Equality between Women and Men and of the High Council for Family, Childhood and the Elderly.
96. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela made recommendations.
97. Viet Nam welcomed measures on gender equality and on combating racism and anti-Semitism.
98. Zambia welcomed initiatives at the international level to promote women's rights, but noted insufficient progress at the national level in that regard.
99. The French delegation had stated that fighting impunity and preventing genocide were among the central objectives of French diplomacy. France had cooperated closely with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and subsequently with the residual mechanism to ensure that full information about the events in Rwanda in 1994 were brought to light in a completely impartial manner. In 2012, a specialized judicial centre had been established to provide comprehensive support to the judicial authorities investigating persons suspected of being involved in the genocide. In 1998 the French National Assembly had established a fact-finding mission on French military operations in Rwanda. A large volume of archives had already been opened and the mission's work was ongoing.

100. France was working to ensure that allegations of sexual abuse of children by French soldiers in the Central African Republic were investigated and that if those allegations were proven, that the persons responsible were brought to justice. France placed great importance on the prevention and suppression of sexual violence and demanded exemplary conduct from its soldiers.

101. The French delegation recalled that the President of the Republic had committed to increasing public spending on development assistance to 0.55 per cent of the gross domestic product by 2022.

102. France was committed to secularism and to freedom of religion and belief. The French authorities continued to make strenuous efforts to combat anti-Muslim acts and acts of hatred. The principle of secularism applied to providers of public services rather than to users of those services. As an exception to that rule, in 2004 lawmakers had chosen to prohibit the wearing of overt religious symbols in public schools in order to preserve the neutrality of public education, maintain a calm atmosphere in the schools and help to ensure that children were not discriminated against because of their religion.

103. France was committed to strengthening its efforts to uphold the rights of persons with disabilities, as had been demonstrated on the occasion of the visit of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities to France in October 2017. Measures were being taken to ensure that persons with disabilities were better able to exercise their right to vote, to improve the schooling provided to students with disabilities, to ensure the inclusion of persons with disabilities in transport and housing, and to do more to help such persons find employment and remain in their jobs. Steps were also being taken to monitor the use of restraints and seclusion more closely.

104. Afghanistan praised the interministerial plan of action against radicalization and terrorism.

105. Albania noted efforts to combat racial discrimination, xenophobia and anti-Semitism.

106. Algeria made recommendations.

107. Andorra welcomed the recent ratification of international human rights instruments.

108. Angola welcomed progress made on civil, political and social rights, especially regarding immigration.

109. Argentina highlighted efforts to combat discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, and to promote children's rights.

110. Armenia welcomed the commitment to counter impunity, and the High Council for Family, Childhood and the Elderly.

111. Australia welcomed laws on same-sex marriage and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, but noted the stigmatization of minority groups.

112. Austria commended France for lifting the state of emergency following the 2015 terrorist attacks.

113. Azerbaijan appreciated efforts to implement recommendations from the second review cycle.

114. Bahrain commended France for its policy on migrant children and refugee children.

115. Bangladesh welcomed efforts to combat discrimination, but expressed concern at reports of racial profiling.

116. Belarus made recommendations.

117. Belgium made recommendations.

118. Benin welcomed the ratification of Council of Europe and International Labour Organization (ILO) instruments, and the Paris Agreement.

119. Bhutan commended France for ensuring the rights of women, children and persons with disabilities.
120. The Plurinational State of Bolivia welcomed the commitment to combating human trafficking, and the ratification of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.
121. Bosnia and Herzegovina welcomed the national action plan to combat human trafficking.
122. Botswana welcomed the National Action Plan to Combat Racism and Anti-Semitism.
123. Brazil congratulated France for legislating on gender equality, and for combating discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.
124. Bulgaria commended the legislation against discrimination, and efforts to ensure education for all children.
125. Burkina Faso called on France to withdraw its reservations to international human rights instruments.
126. Canada welcomed the promotion of the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and the recognition of children born to them.
127. The Central African Republic called upon France to pursue its efforts to improve the effectiveness of human rights.
128. Chad congratulated France on combating radicalization and terrorism, and on legislating on the rights of foreigners.
129. Chile expressed concern at administrative difficulties facing asylum seekers in France.
130. China expressed concern at the fact that minority groups in France still faced discrimination, despite efforts to combat violence, racism and anti-Semitism.
131. The Congo welcomed the legal framework on business and human rights.
132. Costa Rica noted efforts to fight racism, anti-Semitism, xenophobia and racial discrimination.
133. Côte d'Ivoire congratulated France on its commitment to human rights institutions, and on its legislative reforms.
134. Cyprus welcomed measures to prevent discrimination, and the law on gender equality.
135. Denmark praised progress on lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex rights, and the constitutional guarantee of children's interests.
136. Ecuador congratulated France for combating both impunity in business and human trafficking, and for promoting gender parity.
137. Egypt commended France for fighting racism and xenophobia, and for adopting a national action plan to combat human trafficking.
138. Estonia welcomed efforts to curb violence against women and children.
139. Finland was concerned that children and adults with disabilities faced multiple barriers in accessing education on an equal basis with others.
140. Gabon welcomed measures to ensure the rights of vulnerable groups, and to combat terrorism, racism and poverty.
141. Mexico recognized progress in combating racism and anti-Semitism.
142. Morocco welcomed measures to combat religious intolerance, hate speech and all forms of discrimination.

143. Kenya noted measures to combat terrorism, expressing its solidarity regarding that scourge.

144. In conclusion, France highlighted the quality of the discussion during the review, which served to affirm the importance of the universal periodic review, and emphasized its willingness to respond to the recommendations in a timely manner following interministerial consultations. France had sought to involve the National Consultative Commission for Human Rights in its work and was grateful for the constructive dialogue it maintained with civil society. France recalled that 2018 marked the seventieth anniversary of the signing of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in Paris on 10 December 1948 and that it was the responsibility of everyone to protect and uphold the rights set forth therein.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
