

UNA-China

- Notes that Chinese people's human rights have been improved and there is still work to be done;
- Notes that there have been various human rights awareness-raising campaigns carried out both by the Chinese government and civil society organizations at multiple levels across China;
- There will be more human rights capacity-building programs for the Chinese conducted by United Nation Association of China in order to better equip them with knowledge about human rights;
- Recommends more constructive dialogue and mutually beneficial cooperation between governments and civil society.