135.30. Ensure freedom of expression and media freedom by bringing national legislation into line with international standards, including by decriminalizing defamation and related offences in relevant national laws (Estonia); Source of position: A/HRC/28/11/Add.1 (para. 14, 15, 16, 17)	Estonia	Noted	14.3. Freedom of opinion and expression Affected persons: - general	Not implemented. Defamation is still considered a crime under the 2018 reform of the Criminal Code, and the Social Communication Legislative Package has not been amended, thus leaving the media's contents subject to the appreciation of a new monitoring commission.
135.31. End the practice of using criminal defamation laws to restrict freedom of expression and peaceful assembly and association in accordance with international obligations (United States of America); Source of position: A/HRC/28/11/Add.1 (para. 14, 15, 16, 17)	United States of America	Noted	14.3. Freedom of opinion and expression Affected persons: - general	Not implemented. As reported, the Social Communication Legislative Package is restrictive and used as a means to monitor journalists, who have no choice but to resort to self-censorship, which is also due to the repression of peaceful protests. Therefore, this constitutes a serious breach to international and regional laws and treaties Angola is a party to.
135.34. Respect the right to peaceful assembly in accordance with Angolan and international human rights law; take steps to decriminalise press offences, in line with international standards; and ensure journalists and human rights defenders are not intimidated (Australia). Source of position: A/HRC/28/11/Add.1 (para. 14, 15, 16, 17)	Australia	Noted	14.3. Freedom of opinion and expression 14.4. Right to peaceful assembly Affected persons: - media	Not implemented. Idem. Defamation is still considered a crime against honour under article 216 of the new Criminal Code of 2018 (recently approved). Arbitrary arrests, illegal detentions, repression of demonstrations are all ways to intimidate and silence journalists and HRD.
134.133. Take the necessary measures to create a safe and favourable environment for civil society by respecting the human rights of all individuals, in particular the rights to freedom of expression and association (Switzerland); Source of position: A/HRC/28/11 (para. 134)	Switzerland	Supported	14.3. Freedom of opinion and expression 14.5. Freedom of association Affected persons: - general	Partially implemented. In its decision n°447/2017 adopted on 5 July 2017, the Constitutional Court declared the Presidential Decree 74/15 on NGOs regulation unconstitutional, for being too restrictive. However, in practice, their rights do not seem to be fully protected or respected.

134.137. Adopt practical measures to ensure the right to peaceful assembly guaranteeing the proportionality in the use of force by security forces (Spain); Source of position: A/HRC/28/11 (para. 134)	Spain	Supported	14.4. Right to peaceful assembly Affected persons: - general	Not implemented. Demonstrations are prevented by arbitrary detentions, and participants are met with aggressive behaviour from police officers. Angola is a signatory of several regional international treaties, such as the Southern African Code of Conduct for Police Officials of 2001. Its Constitution (art.30 & 36) does not specifically make provisions for the prohibition or regulation of the use of force, nor are there specific laws to regulate it. However, the 1996 National Police Discipline Regulation states that firearms can be used only in specific cases. According to the law, police officers must abide their superiors' orders even though they are illegal and, yet, they can be prosecuted for harm caused by abuses of their powers.

Right to an effective remedy, impunity Affected persons: - general	Not implemented. In spite of the government's efforts to crack down on corruption, which translated into the investigation and prosecution of ex-officials, there are no reports of investigations for alleged human rights violations committed by security forces.
134.115. Ensure that allegations of abuse by members of security forces are investigated in a prompt, thorough, credible and impartial manner; that those responsible, including officials with oversight responsibility are disciplined or prosecuted in accordance with international standards; and that victims of abuse receive adequate compensation by the State (Germany); Source of position: A/HRC/28/11 (para. 134)	Germany	Supported	16. Right to an effective remedy, impunity Affected persons: - general	Not implemented. Investigation of allegations of abuses are internally treated and are rather opaque. Such investigations have not been made public. However, to this day, police officers and security forces seem to have not been prosecuted for abuses of their power against HRD, activists or journalists; only for criminal offences which affect the State, such as embezzlement.
