

Human rights violations against humanitarian actors

1. This report is submitted by Syria Civil Defense (known as the White Helmets). This submission aims to highlight the human rights condition of vulnerable sectors in Syria, focusing on civil society and humanitarian actors, both as vulnerable actors and as actors responsible for assisting additional vulnerable actors – besieged communities and displaced population - in the context of armed conflict.

I. Human rights violations against humanitarian actors

02. Humanitarian workers are one of the most vulnerable categories in the Syrian armed conflict. <sup>(1)</sup> Humanitarian actors have increasingly become the main targets of airstrikes and military campaigns primarily by the Syrian government forces. The Syrian Civil Defense has documented more than 566 attacks against health facilities and other facilities that provide medical services from 2011 till February 2020. <sup>(2)</sup> Additionally, other parties to the conflict have targeted humanitarian workers – although to a much lesser degree than the Syrian government - with around 48 attacks carried out in the same period. <sup>(3)</sup> Nearly 930 doctors and humanitarian workers lost their lives while performing their humanitarian and moral duty. <sup>(4)</sup>

03. The repeated attacks on many hospitals located in areas that are not under the authority of the Syrian government forces, and in a pattern that always preceded greater military operations in the areas, which confirms the deliberate targeting of them. <sup>(5)</sup> The deliberate commission of IHL violations against hospitals is further confirmed by the fact that the Syrian government forces have used weapons of mass destruction that were able to target and destroy hospitals that were built underground. <sup>(6)</sup> Additionally, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons also established that the Syrian government forces used sarin gas in an attack on Al-Lataminah Hospital through multiple attacks in March 2017. <sup>(7)</sup> The ongoing attacks against humanitarian workers and medical services is threatening the fate of 12 million people across Syria, especially in light of the outbreak of COVID-19, in addition to nearly 4 million people in North-Western Syria who had been deprived of access to at least 67 medical facilities that were destroyed between April 2019 and February 2020, as a result of the attacks carried out by the Syrian-Russian alliance. <sup>(8)</sup>

4. In addition to IHL violations committed during the armed conflict, humanitarian workers continue to be at risk of detention and arrest. <sup>(9)</sup> Indeed, any medical and humanitarian work in areas under the authority of the Syrian government needs to receive approval from the Syrian government. Any medical or humanitarian service provided to vulnerable populations without the approval of the Syrian government would be prosecuted under the Counter-Terrorism Law. According to this law, any medical actors would be considered terrorists for providing medical assistance within these areas <sup>(10)</sup>

5. Since the last Universal Periodic Review, violations against humanitarian workers in the field have sharply increased, the Syrian Civil Defense has documented unprecedented levels of violations of IHL and violations of human rights against paramedics and humanitarian workers in particular. <sup>(11)</sup> In this context, it is necessary to recall the recommendations made by a group of states during the work of the 26th session of the UPR, which focused on multiple subjects, the most important of which is "international humanitarian law" to shed light on the violations taking place in Syria. The recommendations included more than 50 recommendations. Mainly the following (as per the matrix of recommendations): 109.98 - 109.99 - 109.102 - 109.107 - 109.108 - 109.110 - 109.111 - 109.129 - 109.132- 109.144 - 109.100 - 109.117 regarding violations against humanitarian workers and of humanitarian aid and related services, which were accepted by the Syrian government, in addition to dozens of other recommendations, consistently on the same subject, whose implementation was not considered under review. <sup>(12)</sup>

6. In this regard, it should be noted that most of the recommendations accepted by the Syrian government during the last review were not implemented, which reinforces the necessity and urgency to follow up on the recommendations of the universal periodic review with more seriousness. It is also important to emphasize the importance of the current review to be reminded once again how the Syrian government disregards human rights and the rights of humanitarian workers, as it is a major breach of international human rights law and international humanitarian law.

II. Human rights violations against besieged communities and displaced population

7. The continuous and deliberate attacks against humanitarian workers exacerbate the already dire situation in which most of the vulnerable Syrian population lives. <sup>(13)</sup> Together with deliberate attacks against humanitarian actors through airstrikes and arrest campaigns, the Syrian government has also been involved in impeding humanitarian access to vulnerable communities. <sup>(14)</sup> These practices included the politicization of the delivery of humanitarian aid, the imposition of restrictions and obstacles to access it, in parallel with using the policy of starvation and siege against communities living in opposition-controlled areas, it led to the starvation of hundreds of thousands of residents and the loss of life of hundreds of them. <sup>(15)</sup>

8. Government forces and armed groups loyal to the Syrian government -including non-Syrian militias invited and backed by the Syrian government, did not submit to the appeals of humanitarian organizations (civil and international ones) and continued to besiege entire communities so that the entry of humanitarian aid was subject to instant political agreements in accordance with the battles and the geographical expansion of the war. <sup>(16)</sup> The Syrian government deprived the following communities of access to food, potable water and medicines: Ghouta, Qalamoun, Madaya, Eastern Aleppo, Yarmouk camp, Rukban camp, Talbiseh, al-Rastan, Al houleh. <sup>(17)</sup> Some of the anti-government factions also took the same approach and used starvation as a weapon of war in the towns of Kafriya, Al-Foua, Nubl, Al-Zahraa. They justified their actions, because the community alleged "loyalty to the Syrian regime or the Syrian army". <sup>(18)</sup>

9. As a result of the conflict, aid delivery has been politicized by referral to the Security Council to allow the UN to deliver aid through international cross-borders to opposition-led areas. Since 2014, the Security Council has adopted resolution 2165 which has been implemented 5 times until 2018. The annual renewal of the resolution continued until 2021 under the threat of veto which has put the lives of millions of people at risk to get humanitarian assistance. The link between aid delivery and political permission from the security council has impeded the delivery of humanitarian assistance through the international crossing. <sup>(19)</sup>

Recommendations

1. Strengthen a permanent ceasefire, stop the systematic targeting of medical and health facilities and stop using internationally prohibited weapons such as Napalm, cluster and barrel bombs against them.
2. Investigate the methodology of the attacks in a manner that leads to the prosecution of the parties involved and the provision of redress to the victims.
3. Stop prosecutions against health personnel as “terrorists” and abolish the Counter-Terrorism law, and immediately release people arbitrarily detained for their human rights/ humanitarian work, and cease all threats and prosecutions directed against human rights defenders and humanitarian actors.
4. Establish concrete and genuine mechanisms to contribute to the non-recurrence of the use of chemical weapons against civilians and hold accountable those responsible for such violations.
5. Provide facilities to the health personnel to be able to exercise their work without discrimination, especially in light of the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic.
6. Establish accountability processes aimed at investigating and prosecuting the war crimes of using siege as a weapon of war against civilians as well as providing justice and redress to the victims.
7. Neutralize the humanitarian aid delivery and activate all cross-borders with Syria to maximize aid delivery for civilians.
8. Activating all crossings and neutralized from the political process, in accordance with a principle that mitigates the effects of the conflict on civilians who are more than 4.1 million civilians in northern Syria and who are still primarily dependent on humanitarian aid
